Afghanistan

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1919 following the Third Anglo-Afghan War
2. Political Institutions: Afghanistan has a bicameral National Assembly (Jirga). The upper house is referred to as the House of Elders (Meshrano Jirga) and the lower house as the House of People (Wolesi Jirga). Members of the House of People are elected by single non-transferable vote for five-year terms. The President is elected by absolute majority vote through a two-round system and serves a five-year term. The President is the chief of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1931: Constitution establishes bicameral National Assembly. Wolesi Jirga comprised of 216 single-member constituencies.
 - 1964: Women permitted to vote and run for office
 - 1979: Parliament abolished
 - 2005: SNTV system established. There are 34 multi-member districts corresponding to the 34 provinces. The constitution reserves 68 seats to women.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Assembly were held on the following dates.

Albania

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1912 from the Ottoman Empire
2. Political Institutions: Albania relies on a unicameral parliamentary system. Parliament is composed of a total of 140 seats. 100 members are elected through an absolute majority, and 40 seats are obtained through proportional distribution. The president is the head of the government and is elected by parliament for a five-year term upon attaining two-thirds of the vote.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1914: First Albanian Constitution is approved.
 - 1920: Following Italian occupation, a New National Assembly is called by 56 deputies. It demands complete sovereignty.
 - 1921: First direct elections are held. 78 deputies are elected.
 - 1925: A new constitution is passed in favor of Ahmet Zogu dictatorship. Number of deputies increased to 95.
 - 1928: National assembly elevates him to King Zog I. 57 deputies are elected by a relative majority.
 - 1943: Parliament renamed the Fascist Corporation Council ceding all the powers to the king.
 - 1944: Communists ascent to power. They rule until 1990.
 - 1945: Suffrage granted to all Albanians over the age of 18.
 - 1948: Communist party renamed the Albanian Party of Labor (PPSH).
 - 1966: New law stipulates 250 deputies to be elected by absolute majority for a four-year term.
 - 1990: New law passed that allows alternative independent candidates in all constituencies.
 - 1991: Pure majority system. 250 seats directly elected in single-member constituencies by absolute majority in two rounds. If none of the candidates made 25% of the votes, there was a reelection. A reelection had to be scheduled if turnout was below 50%.
 - 1992: New law reduces chamber of deputies to 140 members. Mixed-member system. 100 seats directly elected in single-member constituencies by absolute majority in two rounds. 40 seats directly elected by proportional representation (Hare) and national party lists, on the basis of the number of first round votes won by the party's candidates under the majority system. The proportional seats functioned as corrections, since the seats were distributed based on the unused votes from the single-member districts. There was a 4% threshold for the party list tier.
 - 1996: Mixed-member system. 115 seats directly elected in single-member constituencies by absolute majority in two rounds. 25 seats directly elected by proportional representation (Hare) and national party lists, on the basis of the number of first round votes won by the party's candidates under the majority system. The proportional seats were not connected with the direct seats. There was a threshold of 4% for parties, and for party coalitions an additional 4% for each party included.
 - 1997: 40 seats directly elected by proportional representation and national party lists, on the basis of the number of first round votes won by the party's candidates under the majority system. There was a 2% threshold for the party list tier. New parliamentary elections under the auspice of the international community are held.
 - 1998: New constitution is adopted. It includes provisions that allow for judicial and administrative reforms. The number of seats in parliament is increased to 155.
 - 2005: Mixed-member system. Each voter casts two votes, one for candidates in 100 single member districts and one for a party list in a national constituency with 40 seats. In the single member districts candidates are elected by plurality, in the multi-member constituency seats are distributed by the Hare formula. In the national tier there is a 2.5% legal threshold for parties and a 4% electoral threshold for coalitions.

- 2009: Multi-member system. 140 seats allocated in 12 constituencies with 4 to 32 seats. Seats allocated by D'Hondt for the initial allocation and Sainte-Laguë for allocating seats to political parties within a coalition. A 3% threshold for political parties and a 5% threshold for coalitions. Electoral lists are closed and party leaders can run in all constituencies.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the Kuvendi i Shqipërisë were held on the following dates.

Andorra

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1278 by Paréage from the Kingdom of Aragon.

2. Political Institutions: The Principat d'Andorra is a parliamentary co-principality and relies on the unicameral Consell General. The 28 representatives are elected for a four-year term based on a segmented two-tier electoral system with closed lists. Half of the members are elected in one national constituency based on PR, while the other half is elected by closed party lists in seven constituencies drawing along parish boundaries based on the plurality of votes. The position of head of state remains divided between the Bishop of Urgell and the President of France, even after the ratification of Andorra's first constitution on 14 March 1993, though with a rather representative function.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1419: Introduction of the Consell de la Terra. The representatives of the council, usually consisting of 12 representatives from 6 parishes, were chosen at parish level and then congregated at national level. Only land-owning families (els caps grossos) had the right to vote. Elections were held every year, later on every two years.
 - 1866: Creation of Consell General by the decree of Nova Reforma, which separated elections to the national and provincial assemblies and replaced the Consell de la Terra. The 24 members were elected for four years by absolute majority in six four-member constituencies along the parish boundaries. The right to vote was expanded to the heads of all Andorran households. Elections took place every two years for half of the members of parliament.
 - 1933: Introduction of universal male suffrage for those over the age of 21 (raised to 25 years in 1941)
 - 1975: Reglament Electoral sets down detailed electoral provisions based on rules from 1866 and introduced passive suffrage for women who were granted suffrage in 1971
 - 1978: The number of parishes is raised to seven and accordingly the number of representatives grew to 28.
 - 1981: Executive and legislative powers were divided by decree of co-princes and on 4 January 1982 the Andorra's first Prime Minister elected. Elections are held every four years and replacing all the members of parliament
 - 1985: Voting age fixed at 18 years.
 - 1993: New constitution allows parliament to act autonomously from the co-princes: two-tier electoral system to elect Consell General with half of the 28 members elected in one national constituency and the other half in seven constituencies drawn along parish boundaries.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the Consell General were held on the following dates.

Angola

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1975, from Portugal.
2. Political Institutions: The National Assembly of Angola is composed of 220 seats that are filled by direct election. Five of the seats are multi-member (18) provincial constituencies, and 130 of the seats are one multi-member, nationwide constituency. The seats are filled through direct election with proportional representation, using the d'Hondt method. Of the 220 Deputies, 90 are elected in 18 provincial constituencies (5 per province) and the remainder from national lists. Three Deputies represent Angolans living abroad. Candidates figure on closed lists of parties or coalitions of parties. Vacancies arising between general elections are filled by substitutes elected at the same time as titular members. Currently, its democratic practice is considered to be restricted
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1980: 229-member unicameral People's Assembly elected by 18 Provincial People's Assemblies, which were directly elected by the public. The Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola-Party of Labour nominated candidates as the only legal political party.
 - 1986: People's Assembly expanded to 289 members.
 - 1992: New Constitution following 1991 Civil War peace accords establishes transition to 223-seat National Assembly, with 5 members elected from each of the 18 multi-member constituencies, 130 elected proportionally from a single national constituency, and three from a three-member constituency representing Angolans living abroad.
 - 2008: Elections were not held between 1992 and 2008 because of the second phase of the Civil War.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Assembly were held on the following dates.

Anguilla

1. Year Achieved Independence: Anguilla is an overseas territory of the United Kingdom.
2. Political Institutions: The Anguillan constitution was adopted in 1982, shortly after the island nation broke away from a political union with St. Kitts and Nevis. Anguilla is now an internally self-governing overseas territory of the UK, with a semi-autonomous parliamentary government. The head of state is the British monarch, represented by a governor who is appointed by the monarch. The head of government is the chief minister, who is the leader of the majority party or the majority coalition and is officially appointed by the governor. Anguilla has a unicameral legislature, known as House of Assembly, with eleven representatives. Within the House of Assembly, seven representatives are elected by direct popular vote and four representatives are appointed, two as ex officio members. Members of the House of Assembly serve five-year terms.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1982: The seven elected representatives in the House of Assembly are elected by the first past-the-post system in single-member constituencies.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the House of Assembly were held on the following dates.

Antigua and Barbuda

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1981

2. Political Institutions: Antigua and Barbuda has a history of parliamentary elections dating back to 1946, with universal suffrage since 1951. It did not become an independent state within the British Commonwealth of Nations until November 1, 1981. Antigua and Barbuda is a constitutional monarchy governed by a parliamentary democracy. The head of state is the British monarch, represented in Antigua and Barbuda by a governor general, who is selected by the British monarch with the advice of the prime minister. The head of government is the prime minister, typically the leader of the majority party or the majority coalition in the legislature and appointed by the governor general. The cabinet is called the Council of Ministers and is also appointed by the governor general on the advice of the prime minister. Antigua and Barbuda has a bicameral Parliament consisting of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate is an unelected body of 17 members appointed by the governor general. The House of Representatives is an elected body of 17 members, each representing single-member districts and serve five-year terms.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1981: Members of the House of Representatives are elected by the first past-the-post system from the 17 electoral districts.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the House of Representatives were held on the following dates.

Argentina

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1816 from Spain

2. Political Institutions: Argentina relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, seats 257 members who are directly elected from one of 24 multi-member constituencies using party-list, proportional representation. Seats are allocated according to the d'Hondt method, and parties must secure at least 3% of the votes in order to be seated in the Chamber of Deputies. The upper house, the Senate, consists of 72 members who are directly elected by closed and blocked party lists, with voters having one vote. In each province, the top vote-getting party receives two seats in the Senate, while the second place party receives one seat. As both head of state and head of government, the president is elected by direct vote, needing 45% of the vote, or 40% of the vote if receiving more than 10% of the votes more than the second place candidate, to avoid a runoff between the top two vote-getters.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - Pre-1983: For all but a few elections, deputies were elected using a majority or plurality rule with limited suffrage.
 - 1983: 24 multi-member constituencies to elect deputies to the Chamber of Deputies. There are two election cycles, with 127 deputies elected in one, and 130 elected in the other. Voters have one vote for a closed and blocked party list, and seats are distributed according to the d'Hondt formula. There is a 3% threshold for a list in each constituency.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the Chamber of Deputies were held on the following dates.

Armenia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1918 from the Russian Empire; 1991, from the Soviet Union.
2. Political Institutions: Armenia relies on a semi-presidential system, where both the unicameral parliament (National Assembly) and president are directly elected. The president is elected every five years based on absolute majority in one single constituency. Run-offs between the two best-placed candidates are held if none of the candidates gets more than 50% of the votes. The National Assembly consists of 131 deputies who are elected for a five-year term based on a segmented system. Every elector has two votes. According to the first vote, 41 seats distributed in single-member constituencies by plurality. The second vote is used to elect the remaining 90 seats allocated proportionally by closed and blocked party lists in one nationwide constituency. To qualify for a seat, parties and alliances or blocs must obtain at least 5% and 7 % of valid votes, respectively.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1919: Statue for Elections to the Parliament of Armenia: 80 deputies elected through pure proportional representation in one national constituency with closed and blocked party lists. Seats assigned according to the d'Hondt method. Voting age set at 20 years.
 - 1990: Electoral law of 14 February 1990 maintained most of Soviet electoral provisions: right to vote for all Armenian citizens over 18 years who elected 260 members of the Supreme Sovjet for a five-year term in single-member constituencies (SMCs) by absolute majority, with possible run-offs between the two best placed candidates within 14 days after the first round. Minimum turnout of 50% in every SMC (abolished in November 1990).
 - 1995: New constitution introducing presidential system with one nation-wide constituency. All citizens over 18 years and living in the Republic at least one year before the elections obtained the right to vote. 190 seats of unicameral Parliament were elected in SMCs. Introduction of a segmented electoral system, where each elector received two votes, one for candidate in a SMC (election of 150 deputies by qualified majority) and one for a national list of candidates (election of 40 seats allocated by proportional representation among closed and blocked party lists in a nation-wide constituency). Threshold of 5% was applied.
 - 1999: Abolition of cross-out voting and replacement of qualified majority rule for SMCs by plurality. Reduction to 131 deputies of which 75 parliament members are elected by majoritarian rule and 56 by proportional order.
 - 2005: Amendment of Electoral Code: the 131 deputies are elected every five years based on a mixed electoral system: 90 based on PR in a single nation-wide constituency based on PR and 41 deputies elected in single-member constituencies based on simple majority vote.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Assembly were held on the following dates.

Australia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1901 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: Australia is a parliamentary democracy with the British Monarch serving as the head of state, represented in Australia by an appointed Governor General. The prime minister serves as the head of government and the legislature consists of two chambers, the House of Representatives and the Senate. Until 1918, legislators were elected using a single-seat district plurality system. In 1918 Australia switched to preferential voting within single seat districts. The Senate is elected using single transferable vote system in multi-seat constituencies (2-12 seats).

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1901-1918: Plurality rule with single-seat districts.
 - 1918-present: Australia directly elects 150 members through direct, preferential majority vote. Candidates must receive an absolute majority of votes cast. Voters express a preference among candidates, and if no candidate receives a majority a second round of voting is held. The candidate with the least number of votes is dropped in each subsequent round.

4. Electoral History: Elections to House of Representatives were held on the following dates.

Austria

1. Year Achieved Independence: The Austrian Empire lasted from 1804 to 1867 and was followed by the Austro-Hungarian Monarchy. After defeat in World War I and up to the Anschluss, Austria formed a republic which largely coincided with the Austrian second republic after 1945.
2. Political Institutions: Austria relies on a bicameral parliament with a dominant lower house.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1873: Curial system: I curia (large landowners): direct voting, two-ballot majority system with multi-member constituencies. II curia (chambers of commerce and trade): direct voting, two-ballot majority system within single-member constituencies. III curia (cities, markets, and industrial areas): direct voting, two-ballot majority system with both multi- and single-member constituencies. IV curia (rural communes): indirect voting with 1 elector per 500 voters. In 1897 direct voting in Lower Austria as well as other electoral districts.
 - 1897: Introduction of the V curia (general curia): Indirect voting with the exception of some Länder and constituencies. Two-ballot majority system based on lists.
 - 1907: Abolition of curial system and introduction of direct and secret elections. Single-member constituencies. Seat allocation by plurality in two ballots.
 - 1919: Multi-member constituencies. Seat allocation by D'Hondt formula. Apparentement allowed.
 - 1920: 25 multi-member constituencies, 15 seats returned through a nation-wide second tier. D'Hondt was applied to both tiers. Only parties that won a constituency seat have access to the second tier allocation. Apparentement was abolished.
 - 1923: 150 constituency seats returned through Hagenbach-Bischoff quota. At the second tier unallocated seats returned through four Wahlkreisverbände by D'Hondt. Second allocation reserved for parties that obtained at least one seat from the first allocation at the constituency level.
 - 1949: 165 seats were allocated. Preferential voting introduced. Voters allowed to modify the order of the list and to erase names of candidates.
 - 1970: Number of constituencies reduced to nine Länder and the Wahlkreisverbände to two. At the first tier seats returned by quota system (Hare). Unallocated seats allocated at the second tier by D'Hondt formula. Only parties which already won a constituency seat were allowed to participate in the second-tier allocation. Preference voting reduced to the indication of one candidate.
 - 1971: 183 seats were allocated.
 - 1992: Three-tier system. At the first tier seats allocated in 43 regional districts (Regionalwahlkreise) by quota (Hare). Only parties that already won a seat at the first level or received at least four per cent of the nation-wide votes were allowed to participate at the second-tier allocation (nine Landeswahlkreise). Seats already won at the first tier are subtracted from those received at the second tier. At the third national tier the same threshold as for the second tier applies. Seats allocated by D'Hondt formula. Seats already won at the first two tiers are subtracted from the seats allocated at the third tier.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Council were held on the following dates.

Azerbaijan

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1918-1922 from the Russian Empire; 1991, from the Soviet Union.
2. Political Institutions: Azerbaijan relies on a semi-presidential system with both the President and the unicameral parliament (National Assembly) directly elected for a five-year term. These elections are not held simultaneously. The President as the Head of the State is elected by an absolute majority of the votes cast. If no candidate wins the required majority, a run-off is held between the two best-placed candidates based on a simple majority. The National Assembly consists of 125 deputies who are elected in single-member constituencies (SMCs) by plurality.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1990: As under Soviet electoral provisions, the 350 members to the Supreme Council, which became the first Parliament of Azerbaijan after independence, are elected by absolute majority in single-member constituencies (SMCs), with possible run-offs between the two best placed candidates. Minimum turnout of 50% in every SMC held under the Soviet electoral provisions.
 - 1991: Introduction of a presidential system with the Head of the State elected directly for five years by a qualified majority system, i.e. candidate has to win two thirds of the valid votes.
 - 1995: New Electoral Law provides for a 125-member National Assembly that is elected directly for five years under a segmented system. 100 seats were allocated in SMCs by absolute majority, while the remaining 25 seats were distributed proportionally among closed and blocked party lists in a nationwide constituency, where parties have to gain at least 6% of valid votes. Elections are repeated if the turnout is lower than 25%.
 - 2002: Referendum on the introduction of 39 changes and amendments to the Constitution includes cancellation of the proportional electoral system, i.e. deputies are elected in single-member constituencies by plurality.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the Milli Majlis were held on the following dates.

Bahamas

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1973 from the United Kingdom.
2. Political Institutions: The Bahamas is a constitutional parliamentary democracy within the British Commonwealth. The head of state is the British monarch, represented in the Bahamas by a governor general appointed by the monarch. The head of government is the prime minister, who is typically the leader of the majority party or the majority coalition in the legislative branch and is appointed by the governor general. The governor general appoints the cabinet with the recommendation of the prime minister. The Bahamas has a bicameral legislature consisting of a Senate and a House of Assembly. The Senate is a non-elected body of 16 members appointed by the governor with the advice of the prime minister and the opposition leader. The House of Assembly is comprised of 38 members directly elected to serve five-year terms. Elections to the House of Assembly date to 1729; however, political parties were not introduced until 1956 and universal suffrage was not established until 1967.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1973: Members of the House of Assembly are elected by the first past-the-post system in 41 single-member constituencies.
 - 2012: Lower House seats reduced from 41 to 38.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the House of Assembly were held on the following dates.

Bahrain

1. Year Achieved Independence: August 15, 1971 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Bahrain relies on a constitutional monarchy. The National Assembly (al-Jamiyah al-Watani) is bicameral with a Council of Representatives elected by universal suffrage and the Shura Council (Majlis Al-Shura) appointed directly by the king. The Council of Representatives consists of 40 members elected in single seat constituencies for a four-year term. The Shura Council has 40 members that are appointed by the king.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1973: Constitution establishes directly elected National Assembly with powers to review legislation and pass votes of no confidence. The first National Assembly elected in December.
 - 1975: National Assembly dissolved
 - 2001: Bicameral legislature enacted through new constitution. Members are elected by absolute majority vote through a two-round system. Political parties are banned, however 'political societies' effectively function as parties.

4. Electoral History: Elections of members of the Council of Representatives

Barbados

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1966

2. Political Institutions: Barbados was largely a self-governing colony and began to use representative government as early as 1639. In 1645, the island was split into 11 parishes with two representatives each. In 1831, the right to vote was extended to all citizens regardless of race. Based on the 1966 constitution adopted at independence, Barbados is a parliamentary democracy within a constitutional monarchy, with an appointed governor-general representing the Queen of England and the prime minister as the head of government. Barbados has a bicameral legislature made up of the House of Assembly and the Senate. The House of Assembly consists of 30 elected representatives who serve five-year terms. The Senate is made up of 21 members, all appointed by the governor-general, including 12 with the advice of the prime minister and another 2 based on the advice of the opposition leader.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1966: Plurality system with two deputies per district. Each voter can cast two votes, but they must be for separate candidates.
- 1971: Single-member plurality system with 30 seats.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the Parliament were held on the following dates.

Belgium

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1830 from the United Kingdom of the Netherlands

2. Political Institutions: Belgium relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the Chamber of Representatives, seats 150 members who are directly elected from one of 11 multi-member constituencies using party-list, proportional representation. Seats are allocated according to the d'Hondt method. The upper house, the Senate, consists of 60 members. Of the 60, 50 members are indirectly elected by Belgium's community and regional parliaments, and 10 members are co-opted according to election results. The king is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1831: Multi-member system. Direct elections held by a two-ballot majority. Multiple voting with possibility of cumulating votes on same candidate. Second ballot contested by twice the number of first candidates as seats to be (still) allocated in constituency. Plurality applied to second ballot. Partial elections.
 - 1900: Introduction in 1899 of proportional representation (d'Hondt).
 - 1919: The possibility of provincial apparentement introduced. Two tiers: arrondissement and province. The number of constituencies reduced from 41 to 30. Preferential voting with the possibility of expressing one preference.
 - 1995: Number of constituencies reduced from 30 to 20.
 - 2003: 150 seats are elected, and the number of constituencies reduces from 20 to 11. Primary districts Waals Brabant, Kieskring Leuven and Kieskring Brussel-Halle-Vielvoorde form together a secondary district. Voting occurs through open party lists, and seats are distributed using the d'Hondt method. There is a 5% legal threshold for party lists.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the Chamber of Representatives were held on the following dates.

Benin

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1960 from France
2. Political Institutions: Benin has a presidential system with a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which seats 83 members who are elected from 24 multi-member constituencies corresponding to the country's departments. They are chosen through proportional representation. Each party list includes as many candidates as there are seats to be occupied. Seats are assigned to the different lists on the basis of the "departmental" or "simple" quotient. If seats remain, they are filled under the rule of the greatest remainder.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1977: New constitution goes into effect. The National Assembly is set up to be composed of 336 "People's Commissioners" elected for three years. The electoral process is set to be composed of three stages. The first stage, "democratic consultation", a national list of candidates was drawn up. The objective was to select candidates for the list based on an extensive public debate. On polling day, the national list is submitted to the electorate for an all or none vote.
 - 1984: The number of members in parliament is reduced to 196. Election term was raised a three year term to a five year term.
 - 1991: First elections under the 1990 constitution are held. Registration of opposing parties for elections is permitted. 23 parties grouped into 14 lists. 64 National Assembly seats were on dispute.
 - 1995: Number of seats in the assembly is increased to 83.

Bermuda

1. Year Achieved Independence: Currently a territory of the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Bermuda, which is still an overseas territory of the United Kingdom, is a subject of the British monarch who is represented in Bermuda by an appointed governor. The premier, who gets appointed by the governor and is usually the head of the party in power, is the head of the government. The premier is appointed after every legislative election. Bermuda has a bicameral legislature, with a Senate and House of Assembly. There are 11 seats in the Senate, and the governor or the premier appoints members. The House of Assembly has 36 seats, and members are elected by plurality vote in single-member constituencies.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1620: Governor as appointed by England, a governor's council, a secretary, the Ballifs of the tribes and sixteen elected officials (two from each of the eight tribes) (the Assembly). Male property owners chose the elected officials through voice vote (open ballots).
 - 1622: Assembly elects four officials from each tribe and people from the general lands elect eight officials, for a total of 40.
 - 1963: Number of officials in the Assembly reduces down to 36: four for each of the nine parishes. Use of plurality vote in single-member constituencies.
 - 1968: The leader of the majority party in the Assembly chooses members of the legislature from within his party to join him on the Executive Council, which replaced the Governor's Council.

Bhutan

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1949 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Bhutan relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the National Assembly, seats 47 members who are directly elected from single-member constituencies that use first-past-the-post. The upper house, the National Council, consists of 25 members. Of these 25, 20 are directly elected from single-member constituencies, and five are appointed by the king. Regarding the executive branch, the king is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1953: Unicameral National Assembly established with 38 members nominated by village leaders and approved by families and clans.
 - 2008: Political parties legalized, and the National Assembly divided into upper and lower houses, directly elected from single-member constituencies via a two-round system. The lower house was divided into 47 seats, with the upper house split into 25, 5 seats of which were reserved for appointments by the King. The first round of elections field party-list votes, with individual candidates from the two leading parties contesting in the runoff election.

Bolivia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1825 from Spain

2. Political Institutions: The President is elected by majority vote through a two-round system to serve a 5-year term. Elections to the Bolivian legislature use a mixed electoral system, where voters cast two votes, one for a closed list, and one for a candidate in the local constituency. In the Chamber of Senators, 36 members are elected through a closed-list proportional representation system for 5-year terms. In the Chamber of Deputies, 70 members are elected by plurality vote in single-member constituencies for 5-year terms, 53 members are elected through a closed-list proportional representation system to serve 5-year terms, and 7 members are elected by plurality vote in single-member constituencies to serve 5-year terms. Proportional representation seats are apportioned to each state in proportion to population, and these are allocated to parties in proportion to their respective shares of the Presidential vote in each state. Seven seats for indigenous representatives are allocated to seven of the nine states.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1951: Limited suffrage; a mixture of mixed member and single member constituencies.
 - 1956: Various proportional representation rules with quotas and thresholds; voters had a single vote for a closed list. Full suffrage, with some restrictions until the 1990s.
 - 1994: Adoption of a German-style electoral system; voters have two votes, one for a closed list, and one for a candidate of the local constituency. The closed list vote also determines the president and representation in the Senate.
 - 1997: Voters have two votes, one for a closed list, and one for a candidate of the local constituency. The closed list vote also determines the president and representation in the Senate. The 1997 law mandated a nation-wide threshold of 3%. The d'Hondt rule for allocation of party seats was mandated. No overhand seats, meaning that seats won in the candidate vote that exceed seats earned by the closed list are allocated to other parties, with the least successful parties to be the first deprived of seats.

Bosnia and Herzegovina

1. Year Achieved Independence: Bosnia and Herzegovina declared sovereignty the first time in October 1991. The structure of the state was consolidated after the signing of the Dayton agreement in 1995, but still forms an international protectorate, with decisive power given to the High Representative for Bosnia and Herzegovina.
2. Political Institutions: Bosnia and Herzegovina relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, seats 42 members who are directly elected from two constituencies using open party-list, proportional representation. The upper chamber, the House of Peoples, consists of 15 nominated members (three Bosniak, three Croat, and three Serb members). The presidency is made up of three individuals representing Bosnians, Croats, and Serbians. The head of government is the chairman of the council of ministers who is appointed by the chairman president and approved by parliament.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1990: House of Representatives elected with proportional representation from seven multi-member constituencies.
 - 1996: Multi-member system. 42 members of parliament are directly elected, of which 28 seats are distributed in the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina and 14 in the Republica Srpska. Allocation of seats by simple quotient and greatest remainders formula for left-over seats. Only parties having won at least one seat in the initial (simple quotient) allocation qualify for the latter allotment.

Botswana

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1966 from the United Kingdom.
2. Political Institutions: Botswana has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, consisting up 63 members. Of the 63, 57 members are directly elected from single-member constituencies using simple-majority voting, and four “specially elected members” are co-opted. The remaining two seats are ex-officio seats, filled by the president and attorney general. The president of Botswana is both head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1966: First-past-the-post system in 31 single-member constituencies.
 - 1974: Number of constituencies increases to 32.
 - 1984: Number of constituencies increases to 34.
 - 1994: Number of constituencies increases to 40.

Brazil

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1822 from Portugal

2. Political Institutions: Brazil relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, consists of 513 members who are directly elected from one of 27 multi-member constituencies that use party-list, proportional representation. Seats are allocated according to the Hare quota plus the great average. The upper house, the Federal Senate, seats 81 members who are directly elected. Each of the 26 Brazilian states is represented by three senators, as is the Federal District of Brazil. The president is both head of state and head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - Pre-1881: Indirect elections, very limited suffrage.
 - 1881: Single member constituencies (SMC), where voters cast one vote, and absolute majority to choose winner (a runoff if necessary).
 - 1891: Multi-member constituencies (MMC) of various sizes with multiple limited vote (voters cast votes in number equal to one-third the size of the constituency)/ Seats were allocated as rank ordered by the number of votes obtained.
 - 1905: MMCs of size five, with a few exceptions, and the multiple limited vote.
 - 1932: MMCs of various sizes, and the multiple limited vote.
 - 1937: Elections suppressed under authoritarian regime.
 - 1945: MMCs of various sizes; an open-list system with voters casting one vote for either a candidate or a party label. Proportional representation using the Hare quota, and any remaining seats allocated to the parties with the highest number of votes.
 - 1950: MMCs of various sizes; an open-list system with voters casting one vote for either a candidate or a party label. Proportional representation using the Hare quota, and any remaining seats allocated to the parties according to the highest average method.
 - 1994: MMCs of various sizes ranging from 8 to 70 an open-list system with voters casting one vote for either a candidate or a party label. Proportional representation using the Hare quota, and any remaining seats allocated to the parties according to the highest average method. Parties can list as many candidates as there are seats. Coalitions of parties can list more candidates (the size of the district times 1.5).

British Virgin Islands

1. Year Achieved Independence: British Overseas Territory, granted self-governance in 1967.
2. Political Institutions: The British Virgin Islands has a unicameral parliament called the House of Assembly (previously named the Legislative Council). The House seats 15 members, of which 13 are directly elected – nine from single-member constituencies using first-past-the-post and four from one territory-wide constituency using the single non-transferable vote. The remaining two seats are filled by the Speaker and Attorney General. The Queen of England is the head of state, and the premier of the British Virgin Islands serves as head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1967: Autonomous territorial constitution forms nine-member unicameral legislature, with seven single-member, first-past-the-post districts and 2 seats reserved for the Speaker and Attorney General.
 - 1977: Number of elected single-member seats expanded from seven to nine.
 - 1994: Four additional at-large seats added for a total of 13 elected seats. At-large seats elected under single non-transferrable vote.
 - 2007: The House of Assembly replaced the Legislative Council.

Bulgaria

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1908

2. Political Institutions: Bulgaria has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, consisting of 240 members who are directly elected from one of 31 multi-member constituencies using closed party-list, proportional representation. Seats are allocated according to the Hare-Niemeyer method, and parties must secure 4% of the vote to be seated in the National Assembly. The president of Bulgaria is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1990: Mixed-member system. 400 seats were distributed. 200 seats were elected by double ballot system in single-member districts, 200 by proportional representation (d'Hondt) in 28 districts. There was only one national tier for the proportional representation seats with a 4% threshold at the district level.
- 1991: Multi-member system. 240 seats were distributed by proportional representation (d'Hondt), calculated on the basis of the national vote. There were 31 electoral districts and a national 4% threshold.
- 2009: Mixed system reintroduced. 31 single-member districts introduced in addition to 31 multi-member districts. Total number of multi-member seats reduced to 209.
- 2011: Single-member districts removed. 240 seats once again elected in 31 multi-member districts.

Burkina Faso

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1960 from France
2. Political Institutions: Burkina Faso relies on semi-presidential republic with the prime minister as the head of government. It has a multi-party system and the president as the head of state. The president is elected through popular vote and the prime minister is appointed by the president with approval from the legislature. The parliament consists of the National Assembly (Assemblée Nationale) and the Senate (Sénat). The National Assembly has 111 members elected for a five-year term through proportional representation. Constitutional amendments called for a new Senate to be created in 2013 but it has yet to be formed.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1959: Parliament elected.
 - 1960: Political parties are banned.
 - 1965: Plurality system with one party list.
 - 1970: Political parties re-introduced. Closed-list proportional representation and largest remainder system enacted.
 - 1995: National Assembly becomes lower house of parliament.

Cambodia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1953 from France
2. Political Institutions: Since 1998, Cambodia has had a bicameral legislative system. The lower chamber, the National Assembly, consists of 123 members who hail from 21 multi-member constituencies. Cambodia has closed party-list, proportional representation, and seats are allotted based on the Hare formula. The upper chamber, the Senate, has 61 seats, 57 of which are directly elected, two of which are elected by the lower chamber, and two of which are appointed by the King. The country's executive branch includes the King who serves as the country's head of state and a prime minister who functions as the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1972: The National Assembly seats 126 members who hail from one of 61 constituencies.
 - 1976: The People's Representative Assembly, a 250-member unicameral body, supplants the National Assembly.
 - 1993: A new constitution is drafted by the Constituent Assembly, which later becomes the National Assembly of 120 members.
 - 1998: The National Assembly increases from 120 seats to 122 seats.
 - 2003: The National Assembly increases from 122 seats to 123 seats.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Assembly were held on the following dates:

Cameroon

1. Year Achieved Independence: East Cameroon in 1960 from France, South Cameroon in 1961 from United Kingdom, united in 1961.
2. Political Institutions: Cameroon has a unitary presidential system with a unicameral 180-seat National Assembly. In 1995, constitutional provisions were made for the instatement of an upper legislative house, termed the Senate, but as of 2008 it has yet to be convened. Cameroon has a president and prime minister. Although the prime minister is the head of government, the position has relatively little power compared to that of the president.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1960: Elections are held only in former French Cameroon for 100 seats in the National Assembly.
 - 1961: Elections are held only in former British South Cameroons for 37 seats in the National Assembly.
 - 1964: A plurality system in a mixture of single- and multi-member constituencies is established for 50 seats in the National Assembly.
 - 1966: Opposition parties are banned. Cameroonian National Union (UNC) remains as sole legal party until 1985.
 - 1970: Multi-member constituencies begin following the administrative divisions, while single-member constituencies remain unchanged.
 - 1972: A constitutional referendum overwhelmingly approves the elimination of the two-state federation, the creation of unitary system of government and unicameral legislature, and increased presidential powers.
 - 1973-1983: Legislative elections are held using a national list of UNC candidates for 120 seats in the National Assembly.
 - 1985: Cameroon People's Democratic Movement (RDPC) supplants the UNC as the sole legal party from 1985-1990.
 - 1988: The number of seats in the National Assembly increases to 180, with representatives elected using first-past-the-post system in single-member constituencies and party-list proportional representation system in multi-member constituencies. In multi-member constituencies, a list winning an absolute majority obtains all of the seats. If no absolute majority exists, the list with a relative majority obtains at least half of the seats and the remainder is distributed proportionally according to the Hare quota.
 - 1990: Opposition parties are legalized.
 - 1992: Multiparty balloting is introduced.
 - 1996: A constitutional amendment provides for the establishment of a partly indirectly elected, partly appointed upper house to be called the Senate.
 - 1997: Supreme Court nullifies results in seven constituencies due to irregularities, and contests are rerun as by-elections.
 - 2002: Supreme Court nullifies results for 17 seats due to various irregularities, and contests are rerun as by-elections.
 - 2007: Supreme Court nullifies results for five districts (affecting a total of 17 seats) due to various irregularities, and contests are rerun as by-elections.
 - 2012: Elections to the National Assembly are due but not conducted in light of the government's decision to change the electoral register.

Cape Verde

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1975 from Portugal
2. Political Institutions: Cape Verde relies on a unicameral legislative body, the National People's Assembly (previously the National Assembly). Currently, there are 72 directly-elected members hailing from 16 multi-member constituencies. The prime minister of Cape Verde functions as the head of government and is appointed by the president, who serves as the country's head of state. Since 1992, the president has been elected directly in elections. Prior to 1992, the president was elected by the legislature.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1975: Portugal uses party-list proportional representation in multi-member constituencies of various sizes, and the National Assembly consists of 56 members.
 - 1985: The National Assembly increases from 56 members to 83 members.
 - 1990: Opposition parties are legalized.
 - 1991: The legislative body is changed from the National Assembly to the National People's Assembly, which means that membership reduces to 79 members.
 - 1992: The National People's Assembly no longer elects the president under a new constitution, and presidential elections are determined by direct popular vote.
 - 1995: The National People's Assembly membership is reduced to 72 members.

Chile

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1810 from Spain

2. Political Institutions: Chile relies on a bicameral legislative system. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, has 120 seats from 60 multi-member constituencies, each of which as a two-seat magnitude. Members serve four-year terms. Seats are allocated using a closed party-list majority system; if the majority party wins two-thirds of the vote in a constituency, they receive the two seats for that constituency. If the majority party receives less than two-thirds of the vote, the second seat goes to the second-place party. The Senate comprises 38 members who are directly elected from multi-member constituencies and serve eight-year terms. Chile's head of state and government is the president who serves a six-year term.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1833: Suffrage was granted to literate men and people with certain amounts of wealth.
- 1874: Suffrage was extended to all men, regardless of economic status.
- 1925: Secret ballots and direct elections are established. The parliament is elected using proportional representation where constituencies based on provincial boundaries, and the d'Hondt formula used for the distribution of seats.
- 1932: Chamber of Deputies membership increases from 132 members to 142.
- 1947: Chamber of Deputies membership increases from 142 members to 147.
- 1949: Women are granted the right to vote.
- 1969: Chamber of Deputies membership increases from 147 members to 150.
- 1970: Illiterate people are granted the right to vote.
- 1973: Elections are not held under the Pinochet regime.
- 1980: Constitution formalizes the traditional terms of deputies to be 4 years. Deputies are not elected the same time as the president is.
- 1989: Universal suffrage and secret balloting is reestablished.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the Chamber of Deputies were held on the following dates.

Colombia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1819 from Spain

2. Political Institutions: Colombia uses a bicameral legislative system. The lower house, called the House of Representatives, consists of 166 seats, and members hail from 33 multi-member constituencies. Candidates are chosen on closed lists, and parties can list either as blocks or allow voters to choose candidates within the party. For constituencies with more than two seats, the d'Hondt formula is used. For two-seat constituencies, the Hare quota is used. The Senate is a 102-member body elected from a single national constituency. Colombia's executive branch consists of a president who is elected by absolute majority, with a runoff between the top two vote-getters if necessary.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1853: Universal male suffrage is granted.
 - 1886: Representatives are elected by plurality rule in single-member constituencies.
 - 1910: Representatives are elected using multi-member constituencies.
 - 1932: A party that gains a majority of the votes receives two-thirds of the seats in a constituency, and the second-place party receives the remaining seats.
 - 1951: A party that gains a majority of the votes receives a majority of the seats in a constituency, and the remaining seats are allocated by the Hare formula.
 - 1957: Women gain the right to vote.
 - 1958: The Liberal and Conservative parties agree to split the seats regardless of vote outcomes.
 - 1975: The voting age becomes 18.
 - 1991: Candidates are chosen on closed lists, and parties can list either as blocks or allow voters to choose candidates within the party. For constituencies with more than two seats, the d'Hondt formula is used (with a legal threshold of 50% of the quotient given by dividing the number of seats by the number of valid votes). For two-seat constituencies, the Hare quota is used (with a legal threshold of 30% of the quotient given by dividing the number of seats by the number of valid votes).

The Comoros

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1975 from France

2. Political Institutions: The Comoros relies on a unicameral parliament called the Assembly of the Union (French: Assemblée de l'Union). The Assembly of the Unions consists of 33 seats, 24 of which are elected in single-member constituencies. The remaining nine seats are indirectly elected from the local parliaments of the three islands. The executive branch consists of a president who is elected for four-year terms; this position rotates among the three islands.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1956: Colonial rule introduces universal suffrage for Comorians over the age of 21.
- 1978: The Constitution is amended to lower the voting age to 18 and orders that the president and 42 members of the Federal Assembly be directly elected.
- 1999: A military coup, led by Colonel Azali Assoumani, dissolves the Federal Assembly.
- 2002: A new constitution establishes the 33-seat unicameral Assembly of the Union and a local parliament in each of the three islands.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the Assembly of the Union were held on the following dates.

Costa Rica

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1838 from the Federal Republic of Central America

2. Political Institutions: Costa Rica has a unicameral legislative system. The Legislative Assembly is the country's legislature, and it consists of 57 members who hail from seven multi-member constituencies. Seats are allocated using the simple quote formula (extra votes are given to parties by the number of residual votes, and sub-quotient parties are included in the process of receiving extra votes). Costa Rica is a presidential system, and a presidential candidate must receive 40% of the vote to attain the position. One interesting aspect of Costa Rican politics is that independent candidates are not allowed to run for national office; all candidates must be affiliated with a political party.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - Pre-1913: indirect elections, very limited suffrage; after 1893, proportional representation with multi-member constituencies, using the simple quote formula.
 - 1913: direct elections, limited suffrage, proportional representation with multi-member constituencies, using the simple quote formula (after 1893).
 - 1949: full suffrage, including women; seven multi-member constituencies of various sizes; seats are allocated using the simple quote formula (extra votes are given to parties by the number of residual votes, and sub-quotient parties are included in the process of receiving extra votes). Closed and blocked party lists. Voters do not vote for candidates but for parties.

Croatia

1. Year Achieved Independence: Declared in 1991, internationally recognized in 1992.
2. Political Institutions: Croatia relies on a unicameral legislative system. The Croatian Parliament, Hrvatski Sabor, currently consists of 151 seats. Of these 151, 140 members hail from 10 multi-member districts, three are determined by the votes of Croatians abroad, and the remaining eight are reserved for indigenous communities. Before 2000, Croatia had a semi-presidential system with a bicameral legislature. Today, a president is the head of state and is elected for a single five-year term, while the prime minister serves as the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1990: Single-member districts. 80 seats by plurality in two ballots. All candidates with at least 7% of the vote could enter the second round.
 - 1992: Mixed member system. Elections held in 60 single member districts by plurality. Sixty seats elected in one national district by PR (D'Hondt). Four seats elected by plurality in 4 ethnic minority districts from minorities that contain less than 8% of the population, and an additional minority deputy was elected from the party list section. Thirteen additional seats for Serb minority.
 - 1995: Mixed member system. 127 seats were elected. 28 seats are elected by plurality in single member districts. 80 seats were elected by proportional representation (D'Hondt) in a national tier with a 5% electoral threshold. 12 seats were elected abroad in one tier by proportional representation (D'Hondt). 7 seats were reserved for minorities elected by plurality.
 - 2000: Multi-member districts. 10 electoral districts with 14 candidates each by proportional representation (D'Hondt). One electoral district with a maximum of 12 seats for the diaspora (number of seats is depending on the turnout). One electoral district with 8 members for ethnic minorities. Legal threshold: 5% on the electoral district level.
 - 2003: From the 8 minority seats, 3 Serbian deputies are elected in an ethnic multi-member district by plurality rule and in 5 other single-member districts other minority groups elect 1 deputy each.
 - 2007: Croatian Parliament increases from 151 seats to 153 seats.
 - 2011: Croatian Parliament decreases from 153 seats to 151 seats.

Curaçao

1. Year Achieved Independence: Constituent Country of the Netherlands, gained self-governance in 2010 upon the dissolution of the Netherlands Antilles.
2. Political Institutions: The unicameral legislature is the Estates of Curaçao . It consists of 21 members elected to a four-year term through party-list, proportional representation with results calculated at an at-large level.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 2010: Netherlands Antilles dissolved, and Curaçao became an autonomous territory. The Island Council converted into a unicameral legislature, the Estates of Curacao. The legislature approved the new constitution, and members are elected with proportional representation voting at an at-large level.

Cyprus

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1960 from the United Kingdom.
2. Political Institutions: Cyprus has a unicameral legislative system, and the legislature is called the House of Representatives (Greek: Vouli Antiprosopon), which consists of 80 deputies. Of these 80, 56 seats are reserved for Greek Cypriots and 24 for the Turkish Cypriots. The 56 Greek Cypriot representatives are elected based on PR in six multi-member constituencies. Voters can cast their vote for a party list and up to four single candidates (preferential vote). Regarding the executive branch, the Cypriot president is the head of the state as well as the head of the government and is elected based on absolute majority. If none of the candidates acquires 50% of the votes, a run-off is held between the two best-placed candidates.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1960: The first constitution provides for a parliament consisting of 50 representatives, with 35 seats reserved for the Greek Cypriots and the remaining 15 seats for the Turkish Cypriots. The deputies are elected based on plurality-majority system.
 - 1980: Introduction of proportional system with an 8% threshold.
 - 1985: The number of deputies of the parliament is raised to 80, maintaining the ratio of 70:30 shared between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots (de facto only the 56 Greek Cypriot deputies are elected).
 - 1995: The vote threshold decreases to 1.8%.
 - 2006: Turkish Cypriots living in the Republic of Cyprus are allowed to vote.

Czech Republic

1. Year Achieved Independence: Czechoslovakia became independent in 1918 and in 1992, Czechoslovakia split into the independent Czech Republic and Slovakia.
2. Political Institutions: In 1993, the Czech Republic preserved the bicameral parliamentary system upon disintegration of Czechoslovakia. The lower chamber, the Chamber of Deputies, consists of 200 members from 14 multi-member constituencies. Political parties must attain at least 5% of votes nationally in order to be seated, while two-party coalitions must attain at least 10%, three-party ones must secure at least 15%, and four-or-more-party coalitions must secure at least 20%. Seats are determined using the d'Hondt method. The upper house, the Senate, is composed of 81 members who have been directly elected since 1996. Regarding the executive branch, the president serves as head of state and, until 2012, was chosen during a joint session of both chambers. The president appoints the prime minister and cabinet who are subject to a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1992: Multi-member system. 200 seats were elected in 8 electoral districts by proportional representation (Hagenbach-Bischof). All seats were calculated on the basis of the upper national tier. There was a 5% electoral threshold on the national level for parties, 7% for coalitions of two parties, 9% for coalitions with three parties, and 11% for coalitions with four parties.
 - 2002: The electoral formula was changed to d'Hondt. Some electoral districts were increased from 8 seats to 14 seats. For party coalitions, the threshold was changed to 10% for a two-party coalition and augmented by 5% with every increase in party joining the coalition. Voters could cast two preferential votes.

Denmark

1. Year Achieved Independence: A unified state since the 10th century and a constitutional monarchy since 1849.
2. Political Institutions: Denmark relies on a unicameral parliament. The Danish Parliament includes 179 members who hail from 10 multi-member constituencies. Of these 179 seats, 175 correspond to Denmark proper, while both Greenland and the Faroe Islands receive two seats. Of the 175 seats for Denmark proper, 40 are compensatory seats, determined by the Sainte-Laguë method. When casting their ballots, voters either submit a “personal vote” for a candidate or select one party list. Regarding the executive branch, the Queen is the country’s head of state, and the prime minister serves as the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1894: Single-member constituencies. Plurality by direct voting and by show of hands (without counting) or ballot. In case of uncertainty a roll-call vote was held (with counting). In case of a single candidate, voters could vote either for or against by show of hands or by a roll-call vote in case of uncertainty.
 - 1901: Same procedure as before. In case of uncontested constituencies the vote was held if 50 voters requested a yes/no vote.
 - 1918: Mixed-member system. In Copenhagen and Frederiksberg the former single-member constituencies were substituted by PR (D’Hondt) elections of 24 seats in one constituency. In the rest of the country direct elections by plurality in 93 single-member constituencies were held. 23 compensatory seats were further distributed in two tiers by quota-largest remainders formula. Of these 9 seats were at stake in the Islands region and 11 in Jutland, plus three national compensatory seats. Only parties that had already won a constituency seat or received as many votes in at least one of the three regions, as the national average of votes per seat were eligible to participate in the compensatory allocation.
 - 1920: Multi-member system. Direct elections by proportional representation (D’Hondt) in 22 (23 since the September election) constituencies and a second national tier of 29 compensatory seats allocated as before.
 - 1953 (September): The modified Sainte-Laguë formula replaces the D’Hondt in the 23 constituencies. Among the 175 seats of the Folketing, 135 are allocated by the modified Sainte-Laguë formula in the constituencies and 40 through an upper national tier (with access limited by a threshold).
 - 1971: Proportional representation (Sainte-Laguë). 135 seats are elected in 17 multi-member electoral districts, 40 seats in the secondary national district, and 4 seats in the Faroe Islands (2) and Greenland (2), in which other electoral rules are valid. There is a 2% legal threshold on the national constituency level.

Djibouti

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1977 from France
2. Political Institutions: Djibouti has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which consists of 65 members who are directly elected from one of six multi-member constituencies. Each voter selects one party list. If a party's list secures an absolute majority or a relative majority of valid votes, the party receives 80% of the contested seats, and the other 20% of seats are proportionally distributed to other parties that secured at least 10% of the valid votes. The president of Djibouti is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1982: Voting occurs through one round of party-list voting. Only the People's Rally for Progress party is allowed to submit a party list.
 - 1992: Political parties are legalized.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Assembly were held on the following dates.

Dominica

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1978 from the United Kingdom.
2. Political Institutions: Although Dominica did not become an independent country until 1978, it has employed a parliamentary system with universal suffrage since 1951 (elections date back to 1832). Dominica has a unicameral legislature called the House of Assembly, which includes 21 regional representatives and nine senators. The representatives are directly elected, and they determine whether the senators are appointed or elected. If the senators are appointed, five are selected by the president with the advice of the prime minister, and four chosen by the opposition leader. If the senators are elected, it is by a vote of the regional representatives. Both representatives and senators serve five-year terms, unless the prime minister calls for early elections. The executive branch of the Dominican government consists of a president as the head of state and a prime minister as the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - Regional representatives of the House of Assembly are elected by the first past-the-post system in 21 single-member constituencies.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the House of Assembly were held on the following dates.

Dominican Republic

1. Year Achieved Independence: The Dominican Republic first gained formal independence from Haiti in 1844, soon after which it was annexed by Spain. In 1865, the Dominican Republic gained independence from Spain.
2. Political Institutions: The Dominican Republic has a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, consists of 190 members. Of these 190, 183 are elected using closed party-list system according to the d'Hondt method. The upper house, the Senate, includes 32 senators who are directly elected. Regarding the executive branch, the Dominican Republic has a president who serves as the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1844: Tentative freedom is achieved after declaring independence from Haiti, but democratic institutions are weak and/or nonexistent.
 - 1861: Spain annexes the Dominican Republic, and elections are not a priority.
 - 1865: Democratic institutions begin to solidify, but transitions between governments are bitter and rough, culminating in the U.S. occupation of the Dominican Republic from 1916-1924.
 - 1924: At the end of its occupation, the United States oversees a peaceful election in which the Chamber of Deputies was elected by means of PR in multi-member districts (as well as a Senate and President).
 - 1930: Dictator Rafael Trujillo rules the country in an authoritarian manner, with only show elections for the lower chamber.
 - 1966: In 1966, the Dominican Republic formally alters its constitution to ensure a PR system of representation for the Chamber of Deputies.
 - 1978: In 1978, with the rise of the Dominican Revolutionary Party (PRD), the lower chamber elections become formalized and observed. The Dominican Republic is divided into provinces. Each province is allocated one deputy for each 50,000 inhabitants (plus a fraction for a remainder over 25,000), though the minimum number of deputies for a province is two. These deputies are elected using a simple PR system.

Ecuador

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1830 from Gran Colombia

2. Political Institutions: Ecuador has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which seats 137 members who are directly elected. Of these 137, 116 are from single-member constituencies that use first-past-the-post, 15 hail from one nationwide constituency that uses proportional representation, and the remaining six seats are elected from three multi-member constituencies reserved for Ecuadorians abroad. Ecuador's president is the country's head of state and head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1978: Following a constitutional referendum, a unicameral legislature, the National Chamber of Representatives, is established based on two different representation levels was established, a national level and a provincial level. 12 national deputies were elected at the national level, while the other 57 were elected for each province. An additional number of deputies are set to be elected according to the changing demographic patterns of the country. The provincial seats were distributed among the provinces with a baseline of two per province, with provinces of less than 100,000 people receiving only one, and an additional seat being allocated for every 300,000 people beyond a base population of 200,000. The allocation system for provinces exceeding a magnitude of 2 is proportional, but provinces with 2 contested seats are required to allocate the second seat to the runner-up party list, provided that party received at least half the votes of the winning party.
 - 1998: New constitution establishes the expanded 100-member National Congress, elected from the provinces following an allocation method similar to the 1978 constitution's – with the population baseline for additional seats per province being lowered to one for every 200,000 people over 150,000. No provinces receive only one deputy, establishing a fully multi-member system. The seats elected nationally are abolished.
 - 2007: National Congress dissolved and replaced by National Assembly of Ecuador, wherein 137 deputies are elected from 116 single-member plurality districts and one proportional 15-member national constituency. Six additional deputies are allocated across three two-member districts elected by Ecuadorians living outside the country.

Estonia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1918 from the Russian Federation, 1991 from the Soviet Union
2. Political Institutions: Estonia has a unicameral legislature, the Riigikogu, which seats 101 members who are directly elected from 12 multi-member constituencies. Party-list, proportional representation is used to allocate seats in three rounds of counting. Parties must secure at least 5% of the vote in order to gain seats. The president of Estonia is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1990: Multi-member constituencies. Single Transferable Vote. 499 for Estonian citizens, 43 for those applying to Estonian citizenship.
 - 1992: Multi-member constituencies under proportional representation. 101 seats distributed in 12 electoral districts and a national district for remaining mandates. In the upper tier (12 districts) Hare is used. In the lower national tier d'Hondt is used. A 5% electoral threshold was implemented. The mandates are distributed in three rounds of counting. In the first round, the mandates are distributed by the votes for candidates by the Hare quota. In the second round of counting, mandates are distributed on the basis of the party list votes (only parties that pass the threshold). A party's list receives as many mandates as the number of times that the votes exceed the Hare quota. In the third round, the remaining mandates are distributed on parties' lists by using modified D'Hondt (the series: 2/0.9, 3/0.9, 4/0.9 etc.). In the calculation of the comparative figures of each list, as many first elements of the series as there are mandates distributed on the basis of simple quotas to the same list in the electoral district shall be disregarded.

Ethiopia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1896 from Italy
2. Political Institutions: Ethiopia relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the House of Peoples' Representatives (Yehizb Tewokayoch Mekir Bete) consists of 547 single-member constituencies. Members are elected by plurality vote for five year terms. Twenty-two constituencies are reserved for officially recognized minority nationalities. The number of candidates per constituency is capped at twelve. If more than twelve candidates in a constituency intend to contest a seat, then whoever has the most endorsement signatures is allowed to run. The upper house, the House of the Federation (Yefedereshein Mekir Bete) consists of 153 indirectly elected members who serve for five year terms. Members of the House of the Federation are elected by regional councils. The president and prime minister are both elected by parliament.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1955: Members of the Senate appointed by the Emperor for 6 year terms. Members of the Chamber of Deputies directly elected for 4 year terms. Two deputies elected per district. Political parties banned but candidates allowed to run as independents
 - 1974: Electoral system abolished
 - 1987: Electoral system restored. The unicameral legislature, the National Shengo, consists of 835 members elected for 5 years. One-party rule by WPE. Up to 3 candidates presented to voters in each constituency.
 - 1995: First multi-party elections. Bicameral legislature reintroduced. Plurality system with single member constituencies.

Fiji

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1968 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Fiji relies on a parliamentary representative democracy with a multi system party and a Prime Minister as the head of government. The Parliament of Fiji was a bicameral legislature from 1970 to 2006 until the House of Representatives was suspended by the military coup. During this time, the voting system for the Fijian House of Representatives elected 71 members from single member constituencies. The Senate had 32 members who were appointed by the president. Fiji enacted plurality voting until 1998 when it was replaced with the alternative vote system. The Parliament was completely abolished and reconstructed with a new single chamber consisting of 50 members elected every 4 years using open-list proportional representation in one nationwide constituency.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1970: Fijian Parliament established as a bicameral legislature
 - 1972: House of Representatives has 52 Representatives
 - 1987: Coups d'état disrupts Parliamentary rule
 - 1992: Parliament expanded to 70 Representatives
 - 1999: Parliament is adjusted to 71 Representatives
 - 2000: Coup d'état results in dissolution of Parliament.
 - 2001: Election reinstates democratic system
 - 2006: Coup d'état prohibits elections until 2014 and reconstitutes structure of Parliament.

Finland

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1907 from the Russian Empire
2. Political Institutions: Finland relies on a unicameral parliament called the Eduskunta, which consists of 200 seats. Of these 200, all but one are elected from 14 multi-member constituencies using the d'Hondt method, while the remaining seat is determined in the single-member constituency (the province of Åland). The executive branch of Finland includes a prime minister who serves as the head of government and a president who is the country's head of state.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1907: Multi-member constituencies. 200 seats allocated with D'Hondt highest average formula. Voters allowed to rank-order candidates on the list using three personal votes.
 - 1936: The number of personal votes is limited to two. Voters are no longer allowed to change the order of candidates in the lists.
 - 1954: The number of personal votes is limited to one.

France

1. Year Achieved Independence: French Revolution in 1789
2. Political Institutions: France relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, the National Assembly, consists of 577 members who are directly elected from single-member constituencies. Voting occurs in two rounds. In the first round, a candidate must secure an absolute majority in order to be elected. If a second round is merited, first-round contenders must receive a number of votes that equals at least 12.5% of the number of registered voters in order to compete in the second round. The upper chamber, the Senate, seats 348 members who are indirectly elected from the electoral colleges of the French departments. The president is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.
3. Legislative Branch Electoral System:
 - 1789: Indirect elections in two stages. Cantonal assemblies elect great electors (one for every 100 eligible voters). Great electors elect representatives in departmental assemblies.
 - 1789: Absolute majority in three ballots (run-off between two top candidates).
 - 1793: Direct elections. Three-ballot absolute majority system as before. Electoral constituencies created.
 - 1795: Indirect elections. Scrutin de liste: all departmental candidates elected from the same list. Three-ballot majority system with plurality sufficient in the third ballot.
 - 1799: Formation of lists for Tribune and Legislative Body: arrondissement lists among which one-tenth was chosen. From these a further tenth is chosen and sent to build département lists. A tenth of the departmental lists chosen to form the national list from which the Senate chooses members of the Tribune and the Legislative Body.
 - 1802: Members of the collèges électoraux chosen from the 600 higher taxpayers. As above but cantonal assemblies appoint the members of the collèges électoraux of the arrondissements (one out for every 500 eligible voters) and the départements (one for every 1,000). First Consul was allowed to add ten more members to each college.
 - 1815: Indirect elections in two stages: at the level of arrondissements primary assemblies propose as many candidates as there are seats to be returned at the level of the départements whose colleges in turn elect members of parliament. Half of the elected candidates must stem from proposals of arrondissement level. Three-ballot majority elections with run-off at third ballot for both stages.
 - 1817: Direct elections based on département lists. Multiple voting: panachage but no accumulation of votes. Three-ballot majority system. Absolute majority and turnout of at least 25 per cent required. Plurality at third ballot.
 - 1820: Indirect elections with 258 deputies elected by arrondissement colleges and 172 at the département level by upper class of tax payers. Three-ballot electoral system with run-off between two top candidates at the third ballot.
 - 1829: Abolition of 258 arrondissement elections. Ordinance abolishing arrondissement elections never goes into effect.
 - 1831: Single-member constituencies. Direct elections with three-ballot majority system, run-off election at the third ballot.
 - 1848: Multi-member constituencies. Plurality with single ballot. Minimum requirement for election: 2,000 votes. Second ballot only if no candidate reaches this quorum. Voters allowed to cast as many votes as there are seats to be allocated (multiple voting).
 - 1852: Single-member constituencies. Two-ballot majority system with absolute majority (and one-quarter of the votes of the persons entitled to vote) at the first ballot and plurality at the second ballot. Free access to second ballot.

- 1885: Multi-member constituencies. Two-ballot majority system with absolute majority (and one-quarter of the votes of the persons entitled to vote) at the first ballot and plurality at the second ballot as above. Voters casted as many votes as there were seats to be returned in each constituency. Panachage allowed but no cumulative voting.
- 1889: Single-member constituencies.
- 1919: Mixed member system. PR and majority elections.
- 1924: Each list had to contain as many candidates as there were seats to be returned in the constituency.
- 1928: Single-member constituencies. Two-ballot majority system as in 1852.
- 1945: Multi-member constituencies. Quota system (Hagenbach-Bischoff) applied to closed lists.
- 1946: Preferential voting.
- 1951: Multi-member constituencies. 544 seats allocated with apparentement of lists and majority prime. The national (that is, with candidates in at least 30 per cent of constituencies) list or listes apparentées obtaining the absolute majority win all the seats of the multi-member constituency (départements or fractions of départements). Seats are distributed proportionally among the listes apparentées (highest average system). If no list or liste apparentée obtained the quota, elections were invalid and had to be repeated in those constituencies by absolute majority, then PR (highest average system). Five per cent electoral threshold. In two départements (Seine and Seine-et-Oise) elections by PR (largest reminders system) with preferential voting and panachage.
- 1958: Single-member constituencies. 465 seats elected with two-ballot majority system. Absolute majority required for election in the first ballot, plurality in the second. Access to second ballot limited to candidates who reached five per cent in the first ballot.
- 1967: 470 seats were allocated. Access to second ballot limited to candidates who reached 10 per cent in the first ballot.
- 1973: 473 seats were allocated.
- 1976: Access to second ballot limited to candidates who reached 12.5 per cent in the first ballot.
- 1978: 477 seats were allocated.
- 1986: Multi-member constituencies. 556 seats distributed with quota system (Hagenbach-Bischoff) applied to closed lists. There was a threshold of five per cent in multi-member départements.
- 1988: Single-member constituencies. 577 seats allocated by two-ballot majority system.
- 1993: 577 seats were allocated.

The Gambia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1965 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: The Gambia relies on a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which seats 53 members. Of these 53, 48 members are directly elected from single-member constituencies using first-past-the-post. The five remaining members are appointed by the president, who is the country's head of state and head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1966: The House of Representatives included 40 members, 32 of whom were directly elected for five-year terms, plus eight appointees by the Governor-General as advised by the Prime Minister. The appointed members, including the Speaker of the House (elected by the other members), lacked voting power.
 - 1972: The 40-member House consisted of 32 directly elected members, three members appointed by the President, four indirectly elected by head chiefs, and the Attorney General (ex officio).
 - 1977: The number of directly elected members was expanded to 34.
 - 1982: The size of the House was further enlarged to include 50 members, including 36 who were directly elected, five indirectly elected by head chiefs, eight appointed by the Governor-General, and the Attorney General (ex officio).
 - 1996: The newly established National Assembly consisted of 49 members, of whom 45 were directly elected and four were appointed by the President.
 - 2002: The number of directly elected members was increased to 48 to reflect recent population growth. Five members are appointed.

Georgia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1918-1922 from the Russian Empire, 1991 from the Soviet Union

2. Political Institutions: Georgia relies on a unicameral parliament, the Parliament, which seats 150 members who are directly elected. Of the 150, 73 members hail from single-member constituencies that use first-past-the-post. The remaining 77 members compete in a nationwide constituency that uses closed party-list, proportional representation to allocate seats. The president of Georgia is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1919: Parliamentary system with 130 directly elected members without a legal term of office. Seats were distributed proportionally based on closed and blocked party lists in one nation-wide constituency
 - 1990: New electoral law provides for a unicameral Parliament (Supreme Council) with 250 seats for a legal term of five years. Replacement of the Soviet absolute majority system in single member constituencies (SMPs) by a segmented system, whereby half of the members elected in single member constituencies and the other half based on PR among closed and blocked party lists in one nationwide constituency. Parties had to pass a legal threshold of 4% of the national vote and at least 50% of the registered voters had to participate in the elections.
 - 1992: After the 1991/92 putsch the Military Council reintroduces the Constitution of 1921 establishing a unicameral parliamentary system with directly elected members for a three-year term. Reduction of the number of parliaments to 235 members thereof 84 members elected in SMCs and 150 seats were distributed proportionally in 10 multi-member constituencies. The remaining seat was reserved for the directly elected Chairman of the Parliament, i.e. the Head of the State. Every elector had three to five votes, one for the Chairman, one for the SMC-candidate and up to three preference votes for candidates on the closed and blocked party lists. Abolishment of threshold.
 - 1995: Increase of parliamentary term to four years and introduction of segmented system, with 85 of the 235 seats elected under qualified majority system (quorum: 33%) in SMCs and the other 150 seats still distributed based on PR. Introduction of legal threshold of 5 % of the national vote. Reintroduction of the directly elected president as both Head of the State and Head of Government for a five-year term.
 - 1999: Introduction of one nation-wide constituency for the seats distributed based on PR and raise of the legal threshold to 7%.
 - 2004: Constitutional amendments re-establish the post of the Prime Minister abolished in 1995.
 - 2005: Reduction in the number of seats in parliament from 235 to 150 with 50 members elected in SMCs and 100 seats distributed based on PR.
 - 2008: Change in the share of the 150 members in parliament elected by the segmented system: half of the members elected in SMCs and the other half based on PR. Reduction of threshold to 5%.
 - 2011: Major amendments to the constitution, including among other changes in the share of the 150 elected members in parliament (73 in SMCs and 77 based on PR).

Germany

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1871 unification of the German Reich, 1919 Weimar Republic, 1949 Federal Republic of Germany, 1990 reunification

2. Political Institutions: Germany relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the German Bundestag, includes 631 members. Of these 631, 299 members hail from single-member constituencies that use first-past-the-post. Another 299 members compete in one of 16 multi-member constituencies using party-list, proportional representation, and seats are allocated according to the Sainte-Laguë/Schepers method. There are 33 overhang seats for parties that win more seats in the single-member constituencies than they do in the multi-member constituencies. The upper house, the Bundesrat, seats 69 members who are appointed by länder governments. The president of Germany is the head of state, and the chancellor serves as head of government.

3. Legislative Branch Electoral System:
 - 1871: Single-member constituencies. Two-ballot majority system in 382 constituencies. Absolute majority in first ballot and run-off election between two top candidates in second ballot.
 - 1874: 397 single-member constituencies.
 - 1918: Mixed-member system. 361 single-member constituencies and 26 multi-member constituencies (D'Hondt).
 - 1919: Multi-member constituencies. Seats allocated in 36 constituencies with D'Hondt. Closed lists. Apparentement allowed.
 - 1920: D'Hondt formula replaced by a quota system using an automatic quota of 60,000 votes. Three-tier allocation of seats: 35 constituencies, 17 groups of constituencies (Wahlkreisverbände) and national level. Combination of lists in groups of constituencies allowed. Allocation of seats at constituency and national levels.
 - 1949: Mixed-member system. Voters have one vote counting for both the direct allocation of 60 per cent (242) of directly-elected representatives in single-member constituencies by plurality and 40 per cent (158) of representatives elected on Land lists by D'Hondt formula. Electoral threshold of 5 per cent (in at least one Land) or one direct mandate. System of excess mandates.
 - 1953: Each voter has two votes: the first (Erststimme) is used to elect the 242 representatives in single-member constituencies; the second (Zweitstimme) allocates the 242 seats on the basis of Land lists (D'Hondt). The proportion between single-member and multi-member seats is modified to 50/50. Electoral threshold of 5 per cent at the national level (instead of Land level as in 1949) or at least one direct mandate. System of excess mandates.
 - 1957: Number of direct mandates needed to win seats increased from one to three. Number of direct mandate constituencies increased to 247. The PR allocation occurs nationally and no longer at the Land level, in two steps: first, the votes for all parties at the Land level (which passed the barrier clause) are added to form a national total. On this basis, the D'Hondt method is applied to allocate seats. Second, these seats are redistributed in the Länder by the D'Hondt formula. System of excess mandates. Apparentement between lists at the Land level allowed.
 - 1965: Number of direct-mandate constituencies increased to 248.
 - 1987: D'Hondt system replaced by the quota (Hare) largest-remainder formula.
 - 1990: Reunification: number of direct-mandate constituencies increased to 328.
 - 2002: Direct-mandate seats set at 299.
 - 2013: First election after constitutional changes allowing leveling seats which make sure parties are awarded enough seats to ensure proportionality based on national-level vote shares.

Ghana

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1957 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: Ghana has a unicameral legislature, the Parliament, which seats 275 members who are directly elected from single-member constituencies where winners must secure a simple majority. The president of Ghana is both head of state and head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1956: The National Assembly consists of 104 members.
 - 1960: Following a referendum on the issue of changing Ghana's status from a constitutional monarchy to a republic with increased presidential authority, and Kwame Nkrumah's simultaneous victory in the presidential election, the terms of the members of the National Assembly are extended for five years.
 - 1964: Amendments to the constitution that designate the Convention People's Party (CPP) as the sole legal party are approved in a referendum.
 - 1965: The 198 members of the National Assembly, representing the CPP, are elected unopposed.
 - 1966: The National Assembly is dissolved after a military coup.
 - 1969: Civilian rule is restored and the National Assembly is re-established with 140 members.
 - 1972: A military coup ousts the Busia government and the National Redemption Council began ruling by decree.
 - 1975: The Supreme Military Council (SMC) assumes the role of highest legislative (and executive) body.
 - 1979: The SMC is ousted in a military coup and the Armed Forces Revolutionary Council (AFRC) assumes power under the leadership of Flgt-Lt. Jerry Rawlings. Multi-party elections for the 140-seat National Assembly are held.
 - 1981: After ousting President Hilla Limann in a military coup, Rawlings, chairman of the Provisional National Defense Council (PNDC), suspends the Constitution, bans opposition parties and grants the PNDC full legislative (and executive) power.
 - 1992: The PNDC lifts the ban on opposition parties. Under the terms of the new constitution, the National Assembly is re-established with 200 members.
 - 2004: The National Assembly is increased to 230 members.
 - 2012: The number of constituencies increases to 275, and the National Assembly increases to 275 members.

Gibraltar

1. Year Achieved Independence: Under the 2006 constitution, Gibraltar governs its own affairs, although some powers such as defense and foreign affairs are the responsibility of the United Kingdom.
2. Political Institutions: Gibraltar has a unicameral legislature, the Gibraltar Parliament (previously called the House of Assembly). In addition to the Speaker, it seats 17 members who are directly elected through partial bloc voting. Voters select 10 candidates who do not need to be from the same party, and the winning 10 candidates are those who gain a plurality of votes. The remaining seats are given to “best losers.” The Queen of England is the head of state, and the chief minister serves as head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - Partial bloc voting in which voters select up to 10 candidates. Winning candidates are selected by simple plurality for the ten seats, remaining seats go to runner up.

Greece

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1827 from the Ottoman Empire

2. Political Institutions: Greece has a unicameral legislature, the Hellenic Parliament, which seats 300 members who are directly elected. Of these 300, 282 compete in one of 48 multi-member constituencies, six hail from single-member constituencies, and the remaining 12 are elected in a nationwide constituency. Seats are allocated using open party-list, proportional representation, unless an election is held within 18 months of the last election. In this case, seats are determined through closed party lists. The president of Greece is the head of state, and the prime minister serves as the head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1822: Indirect elections.
 - 1844: Multi-member system. Absolute majority by multiple voting. Subsequent ballots were held until all candidates were.
 - 1864: Mixed-member system. Secret multiple voting. Lead balls replaced paper ballots. Candidates elected by plurality system in one ballot in which 'yes' or 'no' vote was expressed by putting a lead ball into the appropriate box.
 - 1923: In 1923 paper ballots were used in 17 of 98 provinces.
 - 1926: Multi-member system. Paper ballots were used throughout the entire country. PR, whereby one or two preference votes depending on the size of the constituency were possible. The seats allocated in three tiers. Thresholds for access to upper-tier allocations of seats.
 - 1928: Mixed-member system. Plurality elections held in both single- and multi-member constituencies. In multi-member constituencies multiple voting was used. It was possible to panache votes and to use only a limited number of them.
 - 1946: Multi-member system. 'Reinforced' PR system with preferential voting. Seats were allocated in three tiers. There was a threshold for access to upper-tier allocations of seats.
 - 1951: Hare quota at the first stage instead of Hagenbach-Bischoff.
 - 1952: Mixed-member system. Plurality elections in 99 single- and multi-member provinces. Voters voted for lists but could cast one vote for candidates of another list in constituencies with 2–10 seats and two votes in larger than 10-seat constituencies.
 - 1956: Plurality system applied in nine of the 41 departments in which 2–3 seats were returned. In the 26 departments returning 4–10 seats, plurality system accompanied by representation of minorities. In the six departments returning 11–25 seats, PR applied to the two first lists.
 - 1958: New type of 'reinforced' PR elections in 55 departments. Allocation at second tier for parties winning at least 25 per cent of national vote (35–40 per cent in case of alliances of two or more parties respectively). National third-tier allocation.
 - 1961: Reintroduction of Hagenbach-Bischoff method at the first tier. At second tier, threshold lowered to 15 per cent (25–30 per cent for alliances of two or more parties respectively).
 - 1963: Access to second allocation extended to parties winning at least 10 per cent of votes in at least one constituency or one seat.
 - 1974: 'Reinforced' PR elections. In addition to members elected in the departments, 12 Deputies of State elected by PR on national lists. Only parties qualifying for thresholds to the second-stage allocation were eligible for any of the 12 seats of the Deputies of State.
 - 1985: Thresholds for allocation at second stage was abolished. In practice, 'reinforced PR' was discontinued.

- 1989: Third stage of seat allocation abolished and remainders, rather than total votes, used for second-stage allocation.
- 1990: Reintroduction of third tier. At the first tier (56 constituencies) Hagenbach-Bischoff quota applied in each constituency. Unallocated seats distributed in second tier using Hare quota. If seats remain unallocated, the third-tier allocation takes place. Further 12 national seats using Hare quota were distributed.
- 2007: 50 seats as a bonus for the party with the highest share, 250 seats by proportional representation, 3 per cent national threshold. Parties obtaining 3 per cent receive a minimum of 6 seats.
- 2012: Presidential Decree 26/2012 establishes that if elections are held within 18 months of the preceding election, closed party lists will be used instead of open lists.

Guinea

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1958 from France
2. Political Institutions: Guinea has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which consists of 114 members who are directly elected. Of the 114, 38 members are elected in single-member constituencies using simple majority, and 76 members compete in a nationwide constituency using proportional representation. The president of Guinea is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1958: Guinea becomes independent. The current legislative body, the Territorial Assembly, still held power. It was composed of 60 seats.
 - 1963: New electoral law goes into effect allowing multi-party competitive elections. 75 seats elected from one single national constituency through a list ballot.
 - 1974: Number of seats in the national assembly increased to 150.
 - 1979: Number of seats in the national assembly increased to 210.
 - 1990: New constitution goes into effect, introducing mixed-member system. One-third of the 114 seats filled through first-past-the-post elections in single-member districts, with the remaining two-thirds filled through proportional party-list voting in a single national constituency.

Guinea-Bissau

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1974 from Portugal

2. Political Institutions: Guinea-Bissau relies on a unicameral legislature, the People's National Assembly, which seats 102 members. Of these 102 members, 100 compete in one of 27 multi-member constituencies, and two members hail from single-member constituencies reserved for citizens living abroad in Africa and Europe, respectively. Seats are allocated using closed party-list, proportional representation. The president is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1976: In advance of the 1977 election, the Constitutional Assembly is renamed as the National People's Assembly and its membership is increased from 120 to 150.
 - 1980: Joao Viera leads coup, dissolves the Council of State and the National People's Assembly, and establishes the Revolutionary Council to rule the country until elections can be held under a new constitution.
 - 1984: The National People's Assembly is re-established with 150 members. The number of Regional Councils is reduced from 15 to eight.
 - 1991: Opposition parties are formally legalized.
 - 1994: The National People's Assembly is reduced to 100 members, who are elected using a party-list proportional representation system in multi-member constituencies of varying size.
 - 1999: Two seats are added to the National People's Assembly to represent citizens living abroad. The members are selected using the plurality system in single-member constituencies.
 - 2002: President Yala dissolves the National People's Assembly pending new legislative elections.
 - 2003: President Yala is ousted in a military coup.
 - 2004: New legislative elections re-establish the National People's Assembly. Seats allocated to represent citizens living abroad are not filled.

Guyana

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1966 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: Guyana has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which consists of 65 members who are directly elected. Of the 65, 25 members hail from one of 10 multi-member constituencies, and 40 members compete in one nationwide constituency. Seats are allocated using closed party-list, proportional representation according to largest-remainder Hare quota. The size of the National Assembly may increase due to overhang seats if a party wins a disproportionate number of single-member seats. The president of Guyana is the country's head of state and chief executive.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1953: Parliamentary system as established by the UK.
 - 1964: British administration reintroduces the unicameral system with elected deputies. This replaces plurality system with single-member constituencies with proportional representation of nationwide constituency, seats distributed using Droop quota, and later the Hare quota. Number of directly elected members rose from 35 to 53—the remaining 12 were indirectly elected local and regional deputies.
 - 1980: New constitution establishes the office of president who has veto power against the parliament
 - 2000: One third of the candidates in each party's list must be women.
 - 2001: The number of members who are directly elected increases from 53 to 65.

Honduras

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1838 from the Federal Republic of Central America
2. Political Institutions: Honduras has a unicameral legislature, the National Congress, which consists of 128 members who are directly elected from 18 constituencies. Two of these 18 constituencies are single-member. The other 16 constituencies are multi-member constituencies that used closed party-list, proportional representation according to the Hare method. The president of Honduras is both head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1848: Unicameral parliament, number of seats based on size of the population
 - 1848-1865: Bicameral parliament is established
 - 1865: Unicameral parliament is restored
 - 1936: Ten more seats were distributed to candidates who won at least 1,300 votes but didn't win their constituency for the purpose of minority representation
 - 1957: Parliamentary elections no longer have to be won by an absolute majority. Instead, there became a system of proportional representation using the Hare quota and highest remainder.
 - 1988: Number of seats in legislature fixed at 128 from two single-member constituencies and 16 multi-member constituencies.
 - 2005: Panachage within an open list proportional system.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Congress were held on the following dates.

Hungary

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1918

- 2. Political Institutions: Hungary has a unicameral parliament, the National Assembly (Országgyűlés), which consists of 199 members who are directly elected. Of the 199, 106 members hail from single-member constituencies with first-past-the-post, and the 93 members compete in a nationwide constituency through party-list, proportional representation. Each elector submits two votes – one for a candidate and one for a party. Regarding the executive branch, the president of Hungary is the head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1990: Mixed-member system. 176 seats elected in single member constituencies in two ballots. 210 seats elected by proportional representation (Droop) of which 152 in 20 districts with a 4% legal threshold. Unused votes are transferred to the national district, in which 58 seats are allocated by the d'Hondt method.
- 1994: The legal threshold was increased to 5%.
- 2011: In 2011 the national assembly was reduced to 199 seats, of which 106 will be filled in single-member constituencies by the plurality or first-past-the-post method, and the candidate obtaining the largest number of votes in each constituency will be elected to office. Meanwhile, the remaining 93 mandates will be allocated on a national list. Electors will continue to cast two votes: one for a single-member constituency candidate, and another for a national list. National list seats will be distributed by the d'Hondt rule among qualifying parties according to the sum of their national list totals and their surplus votes, that is votes cast for their single-member constituency party candidates, minus part of the votes obtained by winning constituency candidates - specifically, the number of votes obtained by the second-placed constituency candidate, plus one. This new system went into effect in the 2014 elections.

Iceland

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1944 from the Danish monarchy

2. Political Institutions: Iceland has a unicameral parliament, the Althingi, which consists of 63 members who are directly elected. Of these 63, 54 seats are allocated using the d'Hondt method in multi-member constituencies. The remaining nine leveling seats are to ensure that parties receive a seat share proportional to their vote share. Parties must secure at least 5% of the national vote in order to attain a leveling seat. The president is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1874: Mixed-member system. Direct elections for 30 members of the Althingi and 6 nominated by king. Three ballots. Absolute majority required for the first two ballots; third ballot between top two (in single-member constituencies) or top four (in two-member constituencies) candidates of the second ballot. Plurality required on third ballot. In two-member constituencies, voters entitled to two votes.
 - 1903: Three-ballot system abolished and simple plurality introduced.
 - 1908: Directly elected members increased to 34. Six appointed by king.
 - 1916: All 40 seats directly elected. 34 seats in single-member and two-member constituencies by plurality. 6 seats in a national tier by d'Hondt.
 - 1923: The number of members in non-national constituencies was raised to 36. The capital elects representatives by PR and becomes a multi-member constituency (4 seats).
 - 1934: The seats in the constituency of the capital were raised to 6.
 - 1942: The seats in the constituency of the capital were raised to 8. Also two-member constituencies elect members by PR.
 - 1934: 38 members elected in single-member and two-member constituencies by plurality. In the national constituency 11 supplementary seats were introduced to achieve greater proportionality. These were distributed amongst parties obtaining at least one constituency seat by the d'Hondt formula.
 - 1959: Multi-member system. 60 members elected in constituencies by d'Hondt. 11 supplementary seats were distributed among lists by d'Hondt to lists which won at least one seat in the constituency allocation.
 - 1987: Number of supplementary seats increased to 13. Overall number of seats increased to 63.
 - 1999: 54 seats elected in 6 electoral districts by d'Hondt. 9 compensation seats on the basis of the national vote. For the distribution of these national seats a 5% legal threshold is adopted.

India

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1947 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: India relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the House of the People, consists of 545 seats. Of these 545, 543 are directly elected from single-member constituencies. The remaining two seats are appointed by the president. The upper house, the Council of States, consists of 245 members; 233 are indirectly elected by state assemblies, and 12 are appointed by the president. The president of India is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1952: Plurality rule in single-seat constituencies was used for most constituencies alongside about 90 multi-seat constituencies. Constituencies had 2 to 3 seats and were elected on a block vote basis.
 - 1962: Plurality rule in single-seat constituencies. 543 members are elected in first-past-the-post direct elections. Two members are appointed to represent the Anglo-Indian community.

Indonesia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1949 from the Netherlands
2. Political Institutions: Indonesia relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, the People's Representative Council, seats 560 members who are directly elected from one of 33 multi-member constituencies using open party-list, proportional representation. Electors can select either a candidate or a political party. Candidates who do not receive at least 30% of the lowest electoral quotient are eliminated, and parties must secure more than 3.5% of the vote in order to be seated. The upper chamber, the Regional Representative Council, consists of 136 members who represent every province of Indonesia. The president of Indonesia is both head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1950: Open party-list, proportional representation with an average district magnitude of 16.
 - 1971: Closed party-list, proportional representation established
 - 2009: Open party-list, proportional representation reintroduced with 33 multi-member constituencies that elect 560 members.

Iran

1. Year Achieved Independence: Iran became an Islamic Republic in 1979
2. Political Institutions: Iran has a unicameral legislature, the Islamic Consultative Assembly, which seats 290 members who are directly elected from one of 207 constituencies. Voting occurs in two rounds. Winning candidates must secure at least 25% of the votes in the first round and a simple majority in the second round. Five seats are reserved for Zoroastrians, Jews, Assyrian and Chaldean Christians, northern Armenian Christians, and southern Armenian Christians. The Supreme Leader of the Islamic Revolution is Iran's head of state, and the president is head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1906: Suffrage is exclusive to men over the age of 25 who are from one of six privileged social classes. The first Parliament seats 162 members who are indirectly elected by provincial electors.
 - 1909: The size of Parliament is reduced to 120 members, of which 111 are elected from one of 40 constituencies and the remaining nine from minority communities.
 - 1911: The Parliament increases to seat 156 members.
 - 1957: The Parliament increases to seat 200 members, and is continuously increased according to population growth in Iran.
 - 1963: Members are no longer indirectly elected and, instead, are directly elected .
 - 1980: Elections are held to seat the 270-member parliament. Three of the 270 seats are reserved for minorities. Voting age is 16 years old.
 - 1999: Voting age is increased from 16 to 17 years old, and the size of the parliament increases from 270 to 290 members.

Iraq

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1932 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: Iraq has a unicameral legislature, the Council of Representatives, which seats 328 members. Of these 328, 320 members are directly elected from one of 18 multi-member constituencies using proportional representation. Seats are allocated according to the Sainte-Laguë method. The remaining eight seats are reserved for minorities. One fourth of the Council is to be made up by women. The president of Iraq is the head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1922: Constitutional Assembly elections held.
 - 1925: Bicameral legislature is established.
 - 1953: Direct election system in effect.
 - 1947: Congress set to 138 seats.
 - 1980: 840 members running for 250 seats and they were directly elected.
 - 1984: Membership set at 782.
 - 1989: Membership set at 910.
 - 1996: Membership set at 698.
 - 2000: Membership set at 512.
 - 2005: Proportional representation system in effect.
 - 2009: 82 seats now reserved for women.
 - 2013: New electoral law provides for the use of the Sainte-Laguë method for seat allocation.

Israel

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1948

- 2. Political Institutions: Israel has a unicameral parliament called the Knesset, consisting of 120 members who are directly elected from one multi-member constituency. Seats are allocated using closed party-list, proportional representation according to the d'Hondt method. Parties must secure at least 3.25% of valid votes to be seated. The president of Israel is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as the head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1948: Closed proportional representation with a single national district of 120 seats is established.

Italy

1. Year Achieved Independence: In 1861, the Kingdom of Italy was established.

2. Political Institutions: Italy relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, consists of 630 members. Of these 630, 617 hail from 26 multi-member constituencies. One member is elected from the single-member constituency in Valle d'Aosta, and the remaining 12 members are elected by Italians abroad. Aside from the Valle d'Aosta constituency (which uses first-past-the post), seats are allocated using blocked party-list, proportional representation. The upper house of the Italian parliament, the Senate, seats 322 members. Of the 322, 315 are directly elected, five are appointed by the president of Italy, and two are ex-officio seats reserved for former presidents of Italy. Regarding the executive branch, the president is the country's head of state, and the president is the head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1848: (Piedmont) Single-member system. Double-ballot majority in 222–508 constituencies. Absolute majority required on first ballot and run-off election between two top candidates on second ballot. To be elected in the first round candidate further had to obtain one third of the votes computed upon the number of citizens entitled to vote rather than on the number of voters.
 - 1882: Multi-member system. Plurality in 135 constituencies. Multiple voting and limited voting (four votes) in constituencies with five or more seats to be returned.
 - 1892: As for 1848–80. Requirement of one-third of the electorate lowered to one-sixth.
 - 1913: Requirement of one-third of the electorate lowered to one-tenth.
 - 1919: Multi-member system. Secret and direct elections with proportional representation (D'Hondt). Preferential voting or panachage possible.
 - 1946: Introduction of two tiers. Hagenbach-Bischoff method at first tier and allocation through the largest remainder. Two-ballot majority elections in Valle d'Aosta. Preferential voting (three preferences) possible.
 - 1948: First-tier allocation with modified quota (divisor of $n+3$). Four preferences in more than 15-member constituencies.
 - 1953: Legge Scelba. If one list or group of lists (apparentement) obtains the absolute majority of the votes, it receives 380 of 590 seats in the Chamber. These seats are distributed proportionally among the lists apparentées. If no list or group of lists reaches the absolute majority, the law of 1948 is applied.
 - 1956: Law of 1948 reintroduced with Imperiali quota ($n+2$) at the first tier allocation. To participate in the second tier allocation of the seats, the list must receive at least 300000 valid votes and reach the national quota within one constituency.
 - 1992: Limitation of preference voting.
 - 1994: Mixed-member system: 75 per cent of the seats allocated by plurality (475) and 25 per cent by proportional representation (155). Proportional representation by largest remainders (single-tier) with national allocation of seats. The plurality and the proportional representation tiers are linked by the mechanism of scorporo: The number of votes from the second placed candidate in the single-member constituencies are subtracted from the PR votes of the linked party lists of the winning candidate in the multi-member districts.
 - 2006: Multi-member system. 617 seats are elected in 26 constituencies by proportional representation (Hare), a single-member constituency in Valle D'Aosta, and 12 seats in four three-member districts for Italians living abroad. Electoral thresholds: 2% national threshold for parties in a coalition except for the largest party in a coalition, 4% for parties outside a coalition, 10% for coalitions. In a coalition one party needs to obtain at least 2% of the vote.

- 2016: New electoral system goes into effect, consisting of 100 multi-member consistencies. The party that attains at least 40% of the vote automatically receives a winner's bonus of 340 seats. If no party secures at least 40%, a run-off election will take place between the two largest parties. Party and coalition thresholds are increased.

Japan

1. Year Achieved Independence: N/A

2. Political Institutions: Japan has a bicameral parliament. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, currently consists of 475 members who are directly elected from either 295 single-member constituencies or 11 multi-member constituencies. The upper chamber, the House of Councillors, seats 242 members who are directly elected. The prime minister serves as Japan's head of government, and the Emperor of Japan is the country's head of state.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1946: Limited vote with 4-14 seats per district (voters cast fewer votes than there were seats)
- 1947: Single non-transferable vote with districts ranging from 2 to 6 seats.
- 1994: Electoral reform replaces the single non-transferable vote with a plurality and proportional-representation system.
- 2013: Single-member districts reduced from 300 to 295, decreasing the size of the House of Representatives to 475 seats.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the House of Representatives were held on the following dates.

Kazakhstan

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1991 from the Soviet Union.
2. Political Institutions: Kazakhstan relies on bicameral parliament composed of the Majilis (lower house) and the Senate (upper house). The Majilis includes 107 members of which 98 are directly elected using party-list, proportional representation in one nationwide constituency. The remaining nine members are nominated by the Assembly of People. The Senate consists of 47 members with 32 elected indirectly by the deputies of the representative bodies of the regions and major cities of Kazakhstan, and the remaining 15 Senate members are appointed by the president. The president is directly elected and is head of state. The prime minister is head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1978: Parliament (Supreme Soviet) with 360 seats of which 270 are directly elected in single-member constituencies (SMCs) based on absolute majorities for a five-year term. The remaining 90 members are indirectly chosen by public associations.
 - 1993: New constitution establishes the unicameral parliament (Supreme Kenges) with a five year legislature. Of the 177 members, 67 are directly elected base on plurality in SMCs, 42 members are directly elected based on presidential list, and the remaining 75 seats are chosen by public associations and political parties according to plurality.
 - 1995: The bicameral parliament is introduced, and it consists of the Majilis (lower house) and the Senate (upper house). The 67 members of the Majilis are directly elected for a four-year term based on the absolute majority in SMC (minimum turnout of 50%).
 - 1999: Election law extends the Majilis' term length to five years and increases the number of deputies to 77. A segment system is introduced with 67 seats elected in SMCs by absolute majority, and the remaining 10 seats are distributed proportionally among closed party lists in a nation-wide constituency. Electoral threshold of 7% of valid votes is established.
 - 2007: Constitutional amendments provide for an increase in the number of members in the Majilis from 77 to 107 and in the Senate from 39 to 47 (i.e. increase of the senators appointed by the President from 7 to 15). Pure proportional representation and a threshold of 7% for parties to enter parliament is established.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the Majilis were held on the following dates.

Kenya

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1963 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: Kenya relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, the National Assembly, consists of 350 members. Of these 350, 290 members hail from single-member constituencies, 47 seats are held by women elected in each of the country's counties, 12 members are nominated by parties in the parliament proportional to seat share, and one ex-officio seat is for the Speaker. The upper chamber, the Senate, seats 68 members. Of these 68, 47 are directly elected, 16 are held by women who are nominated by parties in the Senate, two seats are reserved for youth representatives, two seats are reserved for persons with disabilities, and one ex-officio seat is for the Speaker. The president of Kenya is both head of state and head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1963-2008: First-past-the-post system in single-member constituencies.
 - 1967: The House of Representatives is comprised of 124 members.
 - 1967: The newly established National Assembly includes 158 directly elected members (with exception of 1983 election, in which the number is 153).
 - 1969: The introduction of a pre-selection process for parliamentary candidates creates a de facto single-party system with semi-competitive elections. Candidates have to be KANU party members for at least three months and pay a nomination fee.
 - 1982: The single-party system is formalized in the constitution.
 - 1988: The number of directly elected members is increased from 158 to 188.
 - 1986-1990: Queue voting is introduced in the KANU primaries, whereby party members demonstrate their candidate preference by lining up in public behind the candidate's image on the day of the primary. Candidates winning more than 70% of the vote in this way were awarded the seat immediately.
 - 1990: Queue voting in the KANU primaries is abolished as part of the transition to the re-introduction of the multi-party system.
 - 1991: Opposition parties are legalized.
 - 1997: The number of directly elected members increased from 188 to 210.
 - 2002: The number of directly elected members increased to 212. Parties nominated additional seats to ensure proportionality and these 12 members are appointed by the president.
 - 2007: Due to electoral violence and instability, 207 of 210 members are elected. Voting is cancelled in the other three constituencies. An additional 12 members can be appointed by the president to ensure proportionality based on national vote share.
 - 2011: The number of members of the bicameral legislature is increased to 337. An additional 13 members may be appointed. Constituencies elect 290 members from single-member districts using majority rule. Gender quotas are adopted so that 47 female members are elected at the county level.

Korea

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1948 (establishment of the Republic of Korea)
2. Political Institutions: South Korea has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which seats 300 members who are directly elected. Of the 300, 246 members hail from single-member constituencies. The remaining 54 members compete in a nationwide constituency through proportional representation.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1948-1961: Plurality rule with single seat districts.
 - 1962-1972: Mixed-member system with 153 single seat districts and one nationwide list tier district with as many as 51 seats. The party that received 50 percent or more of the votes automatically received two-thirds of the list tier seats. If no party won 50 percent of the seats, the party with the largest number of votes automatically received half of the list tier seats. The second-place party received one-third of the list tier seats as long as its vote share was more than double that of the third place party. Failing this, the second place party received two-thirds of the remaining seats. Finally, any leftover seats were distributed to the other parties via proportional representation.
 - 1972-1980: Single non-transferrable vote with two-seat districts to elect two-thirds of members of parliament. The remaining third were appointed by the president.
 - 1980-1987: Mixed member system with two-thirds of the seats elected from two-seat districts using SNTV and one-third of the seats elected from a single national constituency. The party that won the largest number of nominal tier seats automatically received two-thirds of the list tier seats. The remaining one-third of the seats were divided among the other parties on a proportional basis.
 - 1987-1996: Mixed member system with three-fourths of the seats elected from single-seat districts and 14 of the seats elected from a single national constituency. The party that won the most seats in the nominal tier received enough seats from the list tier to ensure that it had a majority in the assembly. The remaining seats in the list tier were then divided proportionally among the other parties.
 - 1996-: Mixed member system remained in place but majority assuring provisions eliminated. One nation-level constituency elects 54 members through proportional representation. These seats are divided among the parties based upon vote share at the district level. The remaining 246 members are elected from single-member districts.

Latvia

1. Year Achieved Independence: Latvia received independence in 1921 and again in 1991.
2. Political Institutions: Latvia has a unicameral legislature, the Saeima, which seats 100 members who are directly elected from one of five multi-member constituencies. Voters select party lists but can also submit preference votes to indicate candidate-specific support or rejection. Parties must attain at least 5% of the vote in order to secure seats in the Saeima. Each candidate's vote equals the number of votes his or her party received, plus or minus the candidate-specific votes he or she received. The president of Latvia is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1918: People's Council established as the first legislature.
 - 1922: First parliament established.
 - 1934: A coup d'état dissolved parliament until 1938.
 - 1989: Citizenship granted to residents who were citizens before June 1940 and their direct descendants.
 - 1990: Single-member constituencies. 201 seats elected through absolute majority.
 - 1991: Latvia reestablishes its independence.
 - 1993: Multi-member constituencies. 100 seats elected in 5 constituencies through Saint-Laguë. A 4% threshold on the constituency-level was adopted.
 - 1995: Members term limit extended from three years to four.
 - 1998: A 5% national electoral threshold introduced.

Liechtenstein

1. Year Achieved Independence: In 1806, from the Holy Roman Empire
2. Political Institutions: Liechtenstein has a unicameral legislature, the Landtag, which seats 25 members who are directly elected from two multi-member constituencies through open party-list, proportional representation. Parties must secure at least 8% of the vote in order to be seated in the Landtag. The Prince of Liechtenstein is the head of state, and the regierungschef serves as the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1862: Constitution creates a parliament consisting of 15 delegates of which 12 were selected by electors and 3 by the prince. Self-employed men aged 24 or above were entitled to vote.
 - 1878: Expansion of suffrage to all men and division of Liechtenstein into two constituencies (Oberland and Unterland). In addition, the six-year term was reduced to four years.
 - 1918: The 12 representatives, previously chosen by the electors, were directly elected by the people using a majoritarian system (7 in the Oberland and 5 in the Unterland).
 - 1921: All 15 delegates were directly elected by the people (9 in the Oberland and 6 in the Unterland). Voting age was lowered to 21.
 - 1939: PR with non-blocked lists is introduced to fill the 15 seats in the two multi-member constituencies as well as a high threshold of 18% (waived by court order in 1952).
 - 1973: PR system with open list was introduced simultaneously with a new threshold of 8%.
 - 1988: Change in number of representatives from 15 to 25 (15 in the Oberland and 10 in the Unterland).
 - 2000: Voting age lowered from to 18 years.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the Landtag were held on the following dates.

Lithuania

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1918 from the Russian Empire, 1991 from the Soviet Union

2. Political Institutions: Lithuania relies on a unicameral parliament (Seimas), which includes 141 seats. Of these 141, 71 are elected from single-member districts. In these districts, at least 40% of the district must have cast a vote, and the candidate must receive a majority of votes. If a district reports a participation rate less than 40%, the candidate must receive a majority of votes and one-fifth or more of the votes of all registered voters in that district. The remaining 70 seats are contested in a nation-wide, multi-member constituency using open-list proportional representation. Elections to the Seimas occur every four years. Regarding the executive branch, the president is elected every five years and by an absolute majority.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1920: The Seimas consists of 112 members from six constituencies.
- 1926: A military coup installs Antanas Smetona, leader of the Nationalists' Union, as president.
- 1940: The Soviet Union establishes Lithuania as the fourteenth republic of the Soviet Union.
- 1990: The Supreme Council becomes the country's legislative body, comprising 140 members with five-year terms in single-member constituencies.
- 1991: In a popular referendum, Lithuanians vote in favor of independence.
- 1992: Lithuania adopts a new constitution (Lietuvos Respublikos Konstitucija), which establishes the Seimas as the nation's unicameral legislative body.

Luxembourg

1. Year Achieved Independence: Luxembourg received independence from the French Empire in 1815. Its independence was reaffirmed in 1839 and 1867.
2. Political Institutions: Luxembourg has a unicameral parliament, the Chamber of Deputies, which consists of 60 directly-elected members who hail from 4 multi-member constituencies. The country relies on party-list proportional representation, allotting seats according to Hagenbach-Bischoff method. Voters can select one party's list, or they can select candidates from different party lists. The Grand Duke of Luxembourg is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the head of government. Voting is compulsory in Luxembourg for those who are 18 and older until they are 75 years old.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1841: Indirect elections
 - 1848: Direct elections
 - 1857: Mixed direct and indirect elections. Of 31 representatives, 15 were elected directly in the districts, and 16 were elected indirectly in the cantons.
 - 1857: Direct elections abolished. Entirely indirect elections.
 - 1860: Direct elections replace indirect elections. Two-ballot majority system. Multiple voting.
 - 1868: Multi-member constituencies. Two-ballot majority with access to the second ballot for twice the number of top candidates in the first ballot as there are seats to be returned in constituency. Absolute majority required on first ballot and plurality on second. Multiple voting.
 - 1919: Allocation of 60 seats at the level of four multi-member constituencies with Hagenbach-Bischoff. Voting made compulsory. Voters are allowed to cast as many votes as there are seats to be returned in each constituency (multiple voting). Number of seats and of votes varies between constituencies. Voters allowed to cast up to two votes for the same candidate (cumulative voting) and to distribute them across different lists (panachage).

Macedonia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1991 from Yugoslavia.
2. Political Institutions: Macedonia relies on a unicameral parliament, the Assembly of the Republic, which currently has 123 members who hail from either one of six multi-member constituencies or three single-member abroad constituencies. The 120 members from the six multi-member constituencies attain seats according to proportional representation using closed party lists. Regarding the executive branch, the prime minister serves as the country's head of government, and the president is the head of state.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1990: Transformation of the tricameral socialist assembly into a unicameral parliament elected every four years. Two-round system based on the French electoral system with 120 seats elected in single-member constituencies (SMCs) based on absolute majority in the first round. All candidates with more than 7 percent of the votes could participate in the second round, in which the seat was distributed based on plurality.
 - 1998: New electoral system introducing a segmented system. Of the 120 parliamentary seats 35 were elected based on PR among closed and block party list in one nation-wide constituency (electoral threshold of 5%). The remaining 85 members were elected in SMCs using absolute majority.
 - 2002: Division of the territory into six equal constituencies electing 20 members each based by proportional representation.
 - 2011: Expansion of the number of parliament members by adding three single-member constituencies using plurality system.

Malawi

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1964 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Malawi has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which consists of 193 members who hail from 193 single-member constituencies. Seats are determined by a simple majority. The president of Malawi serves as the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1961: The single-party National Assembly consists of 53 MCP members, with 3 seats reserved for white representatives.
 - 1966: A new republican constitution officially adopts the single-party system.
 - 1971: No elections are held. As President of the MCP, Banda nominates one candidate for each constituency to run unopposed.
 - 1978: The single-party Assembly grows from 87 members to 141, all of which are directly elected representatives who sit for five-year terms.
 - 1993: A national referendum is passed with approximately 65% support to replace the single-party system with a multi-party democracy, officially ending the rule of the MCP and the lifetime presidency of MCP founder Dr. Hastings Kamuzu Banda.
 - 1994: The first multi-party legislative elections are held, electing 177 members.
 - 1995: A new republican constitution is adopted, reflecting the new multi-party system.
 - 2004: The National Assembly increases to 193 members.

Malta

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1964 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Malta has on a unicameral parliament called the House of Representatives (Il-Kamra Tad-Deputati), currently composed of 69 seats. Maltese elections use the single transferable vote to allocate these seats. Of these 69 seats, 65 are elected from 13 multi-member constituencies, each of which has a five-seat magnitude. The other four seats are bonus seats that the plurality-winning party is awarded. Malta has a parliament-elected president who serves as head of state, while the prime minister is head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1921: Eight constituencies with a four-seat magnitude are formed.
 - 1939: Constituencies are reduced from eight to two, and each of the two constituencies is given a five-seat magnitude.
 - 1947: Malta affords women the right to vote and abandons property-ownership qualifications from voting laws. Constituency number is expanded to eight constituencies, each with a five-seat magnitude.
 - 1962: Malta expands its constituency number from eight to 10, and each of these 10 constituencies has a five- or six-seat magnitude.
 - 1976: Constituency number is expanded from 10 to 13 constituencies.
 - 1987: A constitutional amendment specifies that a majority-winning party of the first-preference votes will secure a majority of seats in the House.
 - 1996: The constitutional amendment pertaining to the majoring-winning party's seat allotment is modified so that the plurality-winning party at first-preference voting is given a majority of seats.

Mauritius

1. Year Achieved Independence: March 12, 1968 from the United Kingdom.
2. Political Institutions: Mauritius has a unicameral parliament called the National Assembly, which seats 62 members from 21 constituencies. There are 20 constituencies with a three-seat magnitude and one constituency (the Island of Rodrigues) with a two-seat magnitude. Additionally, there are “best losers” – i.e., unelected candidates – who receive up to eight seats in the National Assembly. The goal of the best-loser system is to ensure adequate representation for underrepresented groups. The National Assembly elects the Mauritian president, who serves as head of state, and the president appoints a prime minister, who is the country’s head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1963: Ethnic conflicts severely threaten political stability.
 - 1969: Mandate of the pre-independence legislature is extended four years. The Constitution schedules elections in 1976 for a legislature under a prime minister with executive
 - 1972: Government refuses to hold general elections and declares a state of emergency.
 - 1975: Constitutional amendment reduces the voting age to 18.
 - 1976: Elections held for constitutionally mandated Legislative Assembly includes 62 members plus additional seats as needed.
 - 1991: Legislative Assembly approves change of status to a republican system beginning in March 1992, replacing the Queen with an elected president as the head of state and re-naming itself “National Assembly.”
 - 1992: The country’s constitutional monarchy is replaced by a parliamentary republic.

Mexico

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1830 from Spain
2. Political Institutions: Mexico has a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, consists of 500 members. Of these 500 members, 300 hail from single-member constituencies with simple majority voting. The other 200 are elected from a nationwide, multi-member constituency using party-list, proportional representation. The upper house, the Senate, consists of 128 members. Of the 128 members, 96 hail from 32 multi-member constituencies, and the remaining 32 members come from a nationwide, multi-member constituency. The president of Mexico is the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1917: Representatives elected by plurality rule in SMCs.
 - 1963: Representatives elected by plurality rule in SMCs, but a national district (MMC) also allocated seats to minority parties. The modified Hare quota was used in the MMC. In 1973, the legal threshold for minority parties set at 1.5%.
 - 1977: Representatives elected by plurality rule in SMCs, but multiple national districts (MMCs) also allocated seats to parties using proportional representation. Voters had two votes, one for the candidate in the SMC, and one for the party list in the MMC. The modified Hare quota was used in the MMCs.
 - 1987: Representatives elected by plurality rule in SMCs, but multiple national districts (MMCs) also allocated seats to parties using proportional representation. The modified Hare quota was used in the MMCs. Voters had one vote. No party could hold more than 70% of the seats.
 - 1989: Representatives elected by plurality rule in SMCs, but multiple national districts (MMCs) also allocated seats to parties. Voters had two votes, one for the candidate in the SMC, and one for the party list in the MMC. The modified Hare quota was used in the MMCs.
 - 1990: Representatives elected by plurality rule in SMCs, but multiple national districts (MMCs) also allocated seats to parties using proportional representation. Voters had two votes, one for the candidate in the SMC, and one for the party list in the MMC. The modified Hare quota was used in the MMCs. Any party receiving 35% of the vote was entitled to the majority of seats in the chamber.
 - 1996: Representatives elected by plurality rule in SMCs for 300 seats, but multiple national districts (MMCs) also allocate 200 seats to parties using proportional representation. Voters have two votes, one for the candidate in the SMC, and one for the party list in the MMC. The modified Hare quota is used in the MMCs. The MMC lists are blocked and closed. The legal threshold for minority parties was raised in 1996 to 2.0%. No party can hold more than 300 seats in the lower house, and no party can have more seats than 8% over their share of the national vote.

Mongolia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1911 from the Qing Empire.

2. Political Institutions: Mongolia relies on a unicameral parliament, the State Great Hural (State Ih Hural). It consists of 76 representatives, 48 of which are elected in 26 constituencies based on plurality (i.e. at least 28% of valid votes). The remaining 28 representatives are elected based on proportion representation in a nationwide constituency, whereby parties have to pass a 5% electoral threshold. Elections are only valid if at least 50% of all registered voters in a district participate. The president is Mongolia's head of state and is directly elected based on absolute majority for a four-year term. If no presidential candidate obtains 50% of the votes, run-off elections are held between the two best-placed candidates so long as a candidate gains an absolute majority. The prime minister is Mongolia's head of government and is responsible to the parliament.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1924: The first constitution establishes a parliamentary system, the Great Assembly (Ih Hural), a 90-seat body indirectly elected by popular-elected, local assemblies (Hurals).
- 1944: A constitutional amendment introduces universal suffrage.
- 1949: A new constitution introduces direct elections to the Great Assembly (Ih Hural) for a three-year term.
- 1950: The Little Assembly (Baga Hural) is abolished.
- 1980: Constitutional amendments fix the number of deputies at 370 and introduce compulsory voting.
- 1986: Compulsory voting is abolished.
- 1990: A new electoral law restores the Little Assembly (Baga Hural) as a second parliamentary chamber, elected by pure proportional representation. Also, the number of seats in the Great Assembly increases from 370 to 430.
- 1992: A new constitution provides for the establishment of the State Great Hural (State Ih Hural), a 76-member legislature with four-year terms and direct elections. These 76 members are elected by plurality system in 26 small, multi-member constituencies.
- 1996: Introduction of single-member constituencies and qualified majority of 25%.
- 2005: The 26 multi-member constituencies are reintroduced.
- 2011: Electoral system is changed to a mixed system with 48 of the 76 deputies elected in 26 multi-member districts based on plurality with at least 28% of valid votes and the remaining 28 deputies elected based on PR, surpassing a 5% electoral threshold.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the State Great Hural were held on the following years.

Montenegro

1. Year Achieved Independence: 2006 through secession from Serbia and Montenegro
2. Political Institutions: Montenegro has a unicameral Assembly (Skupstina). Members are elected through a closed-list proportional representation system to serve 4-year terms. The president is chief of state and the prime minister is head of government. The President is elected by absolute majority vote for a 5-year term.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 2006: Single nation-wide constituency with 81 members. Five seats reserved for ethnic Albanian minority.
 - 2012: Seats are attributed according to the highest average system (d'Hondt). Parties obtaining at least 3% of valid votes are entitled to parliamentary representation. Reserved seats for ethnic Albanian minority abolished. If none of the lists of a specific minority group obtain the 3% threshold then a lower threshold of 0.7% is used (0.4% for ethnic Croatians).

Montserrat

1. Year Achieved Independence: British overseas territory
2. Political Institutions: Although not independent, Montserrat is a self-governing overseas territory. Montserrat relies on a monarch as the chief of state, a premier as the head of government, and a unicameral Legislative Assembly. The premier is appointed by the monarch. The Legislative Council has nine members elected by popular vote and serve 5-year terms. Two members are chosen ex officio. The Attorney General and Finance Secretary often serve as these ex officio members.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1951: Universal suffrage introduced. Five single member constituencies established.
 - 1952: First elections to the Legislative Council
 - 1970: Single member constituencies increased to seven
 - 2001: Single nationwide constituency with nine members.
 - 2011: New constitution replaced Legislative Council with Legislative Assembly

Mozambique

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1975 from Portugal.
2. Political Institutions: Mozambique relies on a unicameral legislature called the Assembly of the Republic, which consists of 250 members elected in a mixed system. Of the 250 members, 248 are elected from 11 multi-member constituencies through party-list, proportional representation according to the d'Hondt method. The remaining two seats are elected through single-member constituencies reserved for Mozambicans living abroad in Africa and Europe. The electoral threshold for parties to gain representation is 5%. Regarding the executive branch, the president is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as the country's head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1977: Provisional National People's Assembly establishes national electoral law wherein a 210-member People's Assembly was composed of deputies elected by Provincial Assemblies from a list of candidates nominated by the Marxist-Leninist Mozambique Liberation Front. Provincial Assemblies were to be elected by local-level District Assemblies, themselves directly elected by the public.
 - 1986: People's Assembly expanded to 249 seats.
 - 1990: New constitution replaces People's Assembly with Assembly of the Republic, composed of 250 seats to be elected directly through proportional representation.
 - 1993: Electoral Law of 1993 establishes multi-member constituencies, 5% electoral threshold, provision for single-member constituencies, and calculation of proportional representation.

Netherlands

1. Year Achieved Independence: The modern state dates from 1815.
2. Political Institutions: The Netherlands relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, consists of 150 members elected from 20 multi-member constituencies. Seats are allocated using open party-list, proportional representation where parties must secure at least 0.67% of the nationwide vote. The d'Hondt method determines seat distribution for any remaining unfilled seats. The upper house, the Senate, is composed of 75 members indirectly elected by the country's 12 provincial councils. The prime minister serves as the head of government, and the monarch is the head of state.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1815: Indirect elections (members elected by Provincial Councils) according to three estates. Provincial Councils were elected by: 1. nobility; 2. representatives appointed by City Councils (indirect elections); and 3. rural estate (direct elections).
 - 1849: Mixed-member system. Direct elections in 'double constituencies.' In two-member constituencies, every two years one of the two members would be elected for four years. Two-ballot system: absolute majority on first ballot or plurality on second ballot required.
 - 1888: 'Double constituencies' abolished. Two-ballot majority system in 100 single-member districts.
 - 1918: Direct elections by PR (Hare). 'Largest remainders' for unallocated seats. Country divided into 18 kamerkieskringen for the establishment of lists, but a single national constituency used to allocate seats.
 - 1923: If 15 or more seats were not allocated at the first allocation, remaining seats allocated by the highest-average formula.
 - 1933: If the number of unallocated seats at the first allocation is 19 or more, all seats (also those already allocated) are allocated by the highest-average formula. Electoral threshold is the Hare quota.
 - 1956: Parliament size increased from 100 to 150.

- a. Although a unique national constituency has been used since 1918, this national constituency is divided into 18 kamerkieskringen for the presentation of candidates and establishment of lists. Thus, we offer election results at the level of kamerkieskringen. However, from 1933 to 1948, data are not available for this level so data at the provincial level (11 provinces) are presented in CLEA

New Zealand

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1901 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: New Zealand has a unicameral parliament called the House of Representatives, which consists of 121 members. Of these 121, 120 are directly elected. In particular, 63 of the 120 directly-elected members hail from single-member constituencies, 7 are from single-member Maori constituencies, and the remaining 50 are elected from nationwide party lists. The prime minister serves as the country's head of government, and the British Monarch is the country's head of state.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1901: The legislature is elected from single-member, plurality-rule constituencies.
 - 1908: The country experiments with a majority run-off system.
 - 1914: New Zealand returns to the single-member constituencies with plurality rule.
 - 1994: Mixed-member proportional system with 70 seats elected from single-member districts and 50 seats from a national constituency using proportional representation. Seven of the single-member districts are set aside for Maori candidates, and one overhang seat is established to ensure proportional representation.

4. Electoral History: Elections to House of Representatives were held on the following dates:

Nicaragua

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1838 from the Federal Republic of Central America
2. Political Institutions: Nicaragua has a unicameral legislature called the National Assembly, which consists of 92 seats. Of the 92, 90 are directly elected either from one of 17 multi-member constituencies (70 seats) or from one nationwide constituency (20 seats). Each voter is entitled to two votes, one for the national list and one for the departmental list. The candidates for the nationwide constituency are presented in closed lists. Vote to seat conversion is done by using the Hare quota. If seats remain at the national level, the highest average method is applied. Regarding the remaining two seats, one is given to the outgoing president if he/she was elected through popular vote in the outgoing elections, and one is given to the candidate with the second highest amount of votes in the presidential election. The president of Nicaragua is the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1984: Electoral reform following overthrow of Somoza regime. National Assembly consists of 96 seats, 90 of which are elected from nine multi-member constituencies via proportional representation. The remaining six seats are filled by unsuccessful presidential candidates.
 - 1988: Seat distribution revised to 92 seats in nine districts. Districts one through eight are multi-member constituencies elected via proportional representation. District nine is a single-member constituency. Additional seats for unsuccessful Presidential candidates reduced.
 - 1996: Seat districting amended to sixteen multi-member constituencies and one single-member constituency comprising 70 of the total 90 seats. The remaining 20 seats are elected in a single nationwide constituency.

Niger

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1960 from France

2. Political Institutions: Niger has a unicameral National Assembly (Assemblée Nationale). In the National Assembly, 158 members are elected through a closed-list proportional representation system, eight members are elected by plurality vote in single-seat districts to represent recognized minority groups, and five members are elected from single-seat constituencies to represent Nigerians living abroad. Representatives are elected for five year terms. The president is the chief of state and elected through a majority system.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1960: One-party rule by PPN-RDA
- 1974: Military coup ends one-party rule of PPN-RDA and suspends elections
- 1989: Elections restored and MNSD authorized as only legal party
- 1993: First multi-party elections

Nigeria

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1960 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: Since 1979, Nigeria has relied on a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, called the House of Representatives, consists of 360 members who are directly elected from single-member constituencies. The upper house, the Senate, includes 109 members who are directly elected. Nigeria has a president who is head of state and head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1959: Elections held immediately prior to independence to select 312 members of House of Representatives.
 - 1964: Elections to select members of House of Representatives boycotted in some Eastern, Lagos, and Midwest constituencies. Supplementary elections were held in March 1965.
 - 1979: New constitution established a bicameral National Assembly comprised of a 449-member House of Representatives and a 95-member Senate.
 - 1983: Elections held to select 450 members of the House of Representatives and 96 members of the Senate. Following a coup, the Supreme Military Council (SMC) suspended the legislative, executive, and judicial branches.
 - 1989: New constitution mirrored the 1979 Constitution and re-established the bicameral National Assembly.
 - 1992: National Assembly elections were held for a 593-seat House of Representatives and a 91-seat Senate. Competition restricted to two political parties (Social Democratic Party and National Republican Convention).
 - 1995: Restrictions on political parties lifted.
 - 1998: National Assembly elections held during the military rule of Sani Abacha, with all political parties being affiliated with the government and opposition parties prevented from competing. Results were annulled shortly after being counted.
 - 1999: First-past-the-post system in both chambers. The members of the 360-seat House of Representatives elected in single-member constituencies. The members of the 109-member Senate elected in 36 multi-member constituencies drawn along state lines (3 Senators per state), plus one single-member constituency representing the Federal Capital Territory of Abuja.

Norway

1. Year Achieved Independence: In 1814, Norway dissolved from the Denmark-Norway Union.
2. Political Institutions: Norway relies on a unicameral parliament, the Stortinget, which consists of 169 members who are directly elected from 19 multi-member constituencies. Seats are allocated using party-list, proportional representation according to the Sainte-Laguë method. Regarding the executive, the prime minister is the country's head of government, and the king is the country's head of state.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1814: Direct and indirect elections.
 - 1815: Indirect elections in two stages. Valgmandsvalgene: electors elected by plurality in cities and rural constituencies. The number of electors proportional to the number of eligible voters (hundred to one in the countryside and fifty to one in the cities). Storthingsvalgene: elections of the deputies by electors (see text for proportions).
 - 1906: Direct elections in single-member constituencies. Two-ballot majority system in 123 constituencies. Absolute majority required in first ballot and plurality in second. All candidates in the first ballot could run also in the second without restrictions.
 - 1918: 128 constituencies.
 - 1920: Multi-member constituencies. Seat allocation with D'Hondt formula. List apparentement allowed.
 - 1930: Electoral alliances between parties (Listeforbund) introduced.
 - 1949: Electoral alliances between parties (Listeforbund) abolished and list apparentement reintroduced.
 - 1953: D'Hondt series replaced by modified Sainte-Laguë.
 - 1985: Introduction of a second national tier: 157 seats allocated at the constituency level by the modified Sainte-Laguë formula and eight seats allocated nationally on the basis of the highest averages remaining after allocating constituency seats. Only parties receiving at least four per cent of the vote are admitted to this national allocation.
 - 2002: Number of seats increased so that 150 seats are allocated at the constituency level. Additionally, one seat for each of the 19 constituencies is allocated at the national level.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the Stortinget were held on the following dates.

- a. From 1815 to 1885, the dates of elections were fixed by individual communes.
- b. Data is not available for the 1888 election.
- c. For the five two-ballot majority elections from 1906 to 1918, only the first ballot took place on the same day. Second ballot took place on different dates according to constituencies. In 1906 different dates for the first ballots.
- d. From 1882 to 1903, constituencies (valgdistrikter) were subdivided into rural and urban constituencies (landdistrikterne and kjøbstæderne). The rural constituencies (landdistrikterne) were grouped into amter. Election results are usually presented for this level of aggregation. Thus, data in the CLEA dataset are also aggregated into the level of amter and kjøbstæderne, not the level of valgdistrikter.
- e. For the 1891 election, party votes are unknown for the first step in the indirect election.

Pakistan

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1947 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Pakistan has a bicameral parliament. The lower house, the National Assembly, consists of 342 members who are directly elected. 272 members are elected from single-member constituencies and the remaining 70 seats are reserved for women and minorities. The upper house, the Senate, includes 104 members who are indirectly elected. The president of Pakistan is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1970: Plurality rule in single-seat constituencies, with 13 seats reserved for women. Female members were indirectly elected by members of the National Assembly.
 - 1985: Reserved seats for women increased to 20. Seats for non-Muslim candidates set to 10.
 - 1988: Constitutional provision for reserved seats expires.
 - 2002: Constitutional provision for reserved seats reinstated. Number of directly elected seats raised to 342, with 272 single-member constituencies, 60 seats reserved for women and 10 for non-Muslim candidates. Indirect proportional representation is used to allocate the reserved seats. The political parties submit a closed list of reserve candidates and the number of reserved seats are allocated based on the total number of general seats won in the National Assembly. Reserved seats for women are distributed to parties in proportion to the number of general seats secured in each of the provinces. Seats for non-Muslims are distributed in proportion to the number of general seats secured nationally.

Paraguay

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1811 from Spain
2. Political Institutions: Paraguay relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, consists of 80 members who are directly elected from 18 multi-member constituencies. Seats are allocated using closed party-list, proportional representation. The upper house, the Senate, seats 45 members who are directly elected. The president of Paraguay is the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1870: Universal suffrage to all men over the age of 18. Chamber of Deputies had 26 members that served 4-year terms. Elections held every two years.
 - 1911: Secret suffrage was established (mandatory in 1927).
 - 1927: Introduction of minority representation in congress.
 - 1940: Constitution required a unicameral legislature with members serving 5-year terms. There was a representative for every 25,000 civilians. There was a national constituency and the vote from party lists.
 - 1947: Proportional representation in congress.
 - 1960: Put in place the majority plus electoral system where the party obtaining a majority of votes automatically receives two thirds of the seats in congress while the remaining seats are divided among the other contestants in proportion to their total national vote share.
 - 1961: Women get the right to vote.
 - 1967: Legislature became bicameral and members of the Chamber of Deputies serve 5-year terms.
 - 1990: Reestablished the proportional system for the allocation of seats in parliament.
 - 1992: Legislative branch received allowed more influence in government. Chamber of deputies elected in multi-member constituencies.
 - 1993: Chamber of Deputies has a minimum of 80 members.

Philippines

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1946 from the United States

2. Political Institutions: The Philippines relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, currently consists of 291 members who are directly elected. Of the 291, 234 seats are elected from single-member constituencies. The remaining 57 seats are elected from party lists proposed by indigenous minority groups. The upper chamber, the Senate, is composed of 24 members who are directly elected. The president of the Philippines is the country's head of state and head of government.

3. Electoral Systems:
 - 1946: Plurality rule in single-seat constituencies
 - 1978: Block vote system with district magnitudes ranging from 8 to 21. Voters could cast as many votes as there were seats in the district and also had the option of casting a single party vote for the entire slate of party's candidates. 35 of the 200 seats were appointed by the President or elected by government-sponsored sectoral organizations.
 - 1984: Plurality rule in single-seat constituencies with 34 seats v appointed by the President or elected by government-sponsored sectoral organizations.
 - 1987: Mixed-member system with most seats filled via plurality rule in single-seat constituencies, and a few seats filled via presidential appointment from sectoral groups.
 - 1998: Mixed member system with 80 percent of the seats filled via plurality rule in single-seat constituencies, and the remainder via proportional representation from a national list. Parties and sectoral organizations must receive at least 2 percent of the party list votes to receive a seat and are limited to a maximum of 3 seats.

Poland

1. Year Achieved Independence: Poland became independent in 1918 and restored its independence in 1989.
2. Political Institutions: Poland relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower chamber, the Sejm, consists of 460 members who are directly elected in 41 multi-member constituencies using the Sainte-Laguë method of proportional representation. The upper chamber, the Senat, seats 100 members who are directly elected. The president is the head of the state, and the President of the Council of Ministers is the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1919: Multi-member system. Elections by proportional representation hold in 50 districts.
 - 1922: Multi-member system. Elections by proportional representation (d'Hondt) in 64 districts. The higher number of electoral districts in comparison to 1919 was due to territorial expansion.
 - 1991: Multi-member system. From the 460 seats in the Sejm 391 were elected in 37 regional multi-member districts, and 69 in a national. On the district level Hare was applied. In the national constituency Saint-Laguë was used and there was a 5% electoral threshold.
 - 1993: Multi-member system. 460 seats are elected in 52 multi-member constituencies by proportional representation (d'Hondt). There was a 5% threshold for parties and an 8% threshold for coalitions on the district level. On the national level the electoral threshold was 7% for parties.
 - 2001: The number of constituencies was lowered to 41. The seats were allocated by Sainte-Laguë, and the national threshold was abolished.

Portugal

1. Year Achieved Independence: In 1822 a constitutional monarchy was installed in Portugal.
2. Political Institutions: Portugal relies on a unicameral parliament called the Assembly of the Republic, which consists of 230 members directly elected from 22 multi-member constituencies. Seats are allocated using the closed party-list, proportional representation according to the d'Hondt method. Regarding the executive branch, the prime minister is the country's head of government, and the president is the head of state.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1852: Direct elections in multi-member constituencies. Seat allocation with two-ballot system. To be elected candidates had to receive at least one-quarter of the votes. Access to second ballot limited to three times as many candidates as the number of seats still to be filled.
 - 1859: Single-member constituencies. Two-ballot majority system with absolute majority on first ballot. Free access to second ballot.
 - 1884: Mixed-member system. Cities: limited vote in multi-member constituencies (one less vote than the seats to be returned, two less in Lisbon). Countryside: plurality in single-member districts.
 - 1895: Multi-member system. Abolition of single-member constituencies and limited vote.
 - 1896: Mixed-member system. Single-member constituencies except in Lisbon and Oporto.
 - 1901: Multi-member constituencies and limited vote in the whole country.
 - 1911: Mixed-member system. Limited vote in multi-member constituencies and allocation with d'Hondt formula in Lisbon and Oporto (two constituencies each).
 - 1915: Proportional representation in Lisbon and Oporto discontinued. Limited vote system throughout the county.
 - 1975: Multi-member constituencies. Allocation of 250 seats with d'Hondt formula.
 - 1976: 263 seats elected
 - 1979-1987: 250 seats elected.
 - 1991: 230 seats elected from 22 multi-member constituencies.

Puerto Rico

1. Year Achieved Independence: Puerto Rico is a U.S. territory with commonwealth status

2. Political Institutions: Puerto Rico relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, consists of 51 seats. Of these 51, 40 seats are elected in single-member constituencies using first-past-the-post, and 11 are elected from a nationwide constituency through the single non-transferable vote. The upper chamber, the Senate, seats 27 members who are directly elected, plus one additional seat if needed to allow the opposition to have at least one-third of the seats. The head of state of Puerto Rico is the United States president. Puerto Ricans do not vote for the president of the United States, although they may vote in U.S. presidential primary elections. The head of government is a governor who is directly elected by popular vote.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1900: The House of Delegates is Puerto Rico's unicameral elected parliament, which consists of 35 members.
 - 1917: House membership increases to 39 members.
 - 1932: 35 constituencies.
 - 1952: 40 single-seat constituencies, 11 at-large members elected by proportional representation, and up to another three seats allocated to the opposition party.

Romania

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1878 from the Ottoman Empire.
2. Political Institutions: Romania has a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, currently consists of 412 members. Of these 412, 315 members are directly elected from single-member constituencies, 18 are reserved for ethnic minorities, and 79 are overhang seats. The upper house, the Senate, has 176 seats, of which 137 are directly elected from single-member constituencies. A 2015 electoral law will decrease the membership in the Chamber of Deputies (from 412 to 330 seats) and the Senate (from 176 to 136) for future elections. Romania's head of state is the president, while the prime minister serves as the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1990: Multi member system. 395 seats are elected in 41 constituencies. No electoral threshold. Remaining seats are distributed on the basis of the unused votes in a national tier.
 - 1992: 325 seats elected in 42 constituencies. The number of seats is depending on the size of the population. A 3% electoral threshold on the national level is adopted. For alliances the threshold augments by 1% with every additional party. The Hare formula is used at the district level, remaining seats are distributed on the basis of the unused vote with D'Hondt in a national tier.
 - 2000: 327 seats are elected in 42 constituencies. A 5% legal threshold is implemented augmenting by 3% if two parties form an alliance. For each additional member of an alliance 1% is added to the legal threshold up to a maximum electoral threshold of 10%. The legal threshold is lowered to 3% of the national vote increasing by 1% by every additional party in party coalitions up to a maximum of 8%. 18 seats are distributed among representatives of ethnic minorities. Legally constituted organizations of citizens belonging to a national minority (except the Hungarians), which in the elections have not obtained at least one Deputy, have the right to a seat if they have obtained throughout the country at least 5% of the average number of validly expressed votes.
 - 2004: 332 seats are elected in 42 constituencies.
 - 2008: 315 seats elected through 315 single-member constituencies. Ninety-seven additional seats are distributed based on party vote share. Threshold for representation is five percent for parties and eight to ten percent for alliances. A small number of seats are reserved for minority candidates.
 - 2015: New electoral law will decrease the Chamber of Deputies from 412 seats to 330 seats.

Russian Federation

1. Year Achieved Independence: The Russian Federation emerged after the fall of the USSR in 1991.
2. Political Institutions: Russia has a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the State Duma, has 450 members elected through proportional representation using closed party lists. There is one nationwide district, and parties must win at least seven percent of the vote in order to be eligible to gain seats. The 450 seats are allocated using the Hare quota. The upper house, or Federation Council, is not directly elected. Two seats are allocated to each of Russia's 83 regional councils. The president serves as head of state and is directly elected by absolute majority through a two round-electoral process. The president serves for six-year terms. The premier serves as head of government and is appointed by the president.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1993: First legislative elections following the 1993 Russian constitutional crisis. Half of the 450 members of the Duma elected through closed party-list proportional representation. The other half is elected through single-member districts. Seats are calculated using the Hare method, with a five percent threshold. The candidate with a plurality of votes wins in the single member districts.
 - 2005: Single member districts abolished, going into effect the following election cycle. The threshold to win seats under party lists is increased from five to seven percent.
 - 2008: Legislative term limits increased from four to five years.
 - 2009: Parties winning between six and seven percent of the vote are allocated two seats in the Duma. Those winning between five and six percent are awarded one seat.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the State Duma were held on the following dates.

Rwanda

1. Year Achieved Independence: July 1, 1962 from Belgium
2. Political Institutions: Rwanda relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, consists of 80 seats. Of these 80, 53 are directly elected from one nationwide constituency using closed party-list, proportional representation. The remaining 27 seats are indirectly elected; 24 are elected by provincial councils, two by the National Youth Council, and one by the Federation of the Associations of the Disabled. The upper house, the Senate, seats 26 members who are indirectly elected. Rwanda is a presidential system in which the president is both the head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1969: The post-independence National Assembly of Rwanda composed of 47 members elected for four years.
 - 1978: New constitution goes into effect. Unicameral legislature renamed “National Development Council,” comprised of 64 deputies elected for five years.
 - 1981: New electoral law goes into effect determining specifics on the composition of the electorate. The first elections under the 1978 constitution are held.
 - 1991: A new constitution establishing new checks and balances, and a bicameral legislature goes into effect. The National Development Council becomes the Chamber of Deputies. Multi-party politics introduced into Rwandan politics.
 - 2003: New Constitution and electoral code adopted, under which 53 seats of the 80-member lower house of the bicameral parliament is elected from a single national constituency via party list proportional representation. 24 of the remaining seats are to be elected by the 12 provincial councils, two by the National Youth Council, and one by the Federation of the Associations of the Disabled.

Samoa

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1962 from New Zealand
2. Political Institutions: Samoa relies on a unicameral legislature, the Fono, which currently seats 50 members. Of these 50, 35 are elected in single-member constituencies, 12 come from six multi-member constituencies, and two hail from one multi-member constituency reserved for part- and non-Samoans. If election results fail to meet this threshold, the unsuccessful woman candidate with the highest number of votes among unsuccessful candidates is placed on the Fono. The head of state is elected by Parliament and is chosen from the four Tama-a-Aiga high chiefs. The head of government is the country's prime minister.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1962: Constitution enters into force following independence, establishing a unicameral parliament of 47 members, with one from each of 41 territorial constituencies, 6 seats acting as additional seats for certain constituencies as prescribed by law, and a provision for additional members to be elected by an "individual voters' roll."
 - 1963: Electoral Act of 1963 establishes the unicameral body of Samoa (Western Samoa at the time) as being composed of 47 members that were elected for 3 years. Forty-five of these members are elected from a like number of territorial constituencies on a franchise confined to matais (elected family leaders) and two are elected by persons outside that system and registered on the individual voters' roll.
 - 1991: The legislative assembly agrees to increase the parliamentary term from three to five years. Seats are increased from 47 to 49.
 - 2013: Electoral law requires that 5% of the Fono are women.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the Fono were held on the following dates.

Serbia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1878 from the Ottoman Empire. Serbia declared independence again on June 5, 2016 following the breakup of the union of Serbia and Montenegro (2003-2006).
2. Political Institutions: Serbia relies on unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, consisting of 250 members. These members are directly elected from one nationwide constituency using closed party-list, proportional representation. Seats are allocated according to the d'Hondt method. Parties must secure at least 5% of the vote in order to seat candidates; this requirement does not apply to parties that represent ethnic minorities. The president of Serbia is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1870: Electoral law to the Skupstina with direct voting in the cities and voting by electoral delegates in the country. A quarter of the members of parliament were appointed by the government.
 - 1890: Electoral law provides for a constitutional assembly with 419 seats distributed in 55 multi-member constituencies (MMCs) based on PR (size of 3 to 21 seats).
 - 1901: Unicameral Skupstina is replaced by bicameral parliament (restored only two years later).
 - 1921: Unicameral assembly elected for four years.
 - 1922: Reduction of number of MPs to 314 and constituencies to 8.
 - 1931: Reintroduction of bicameral parliament with the chamber of deputies elected for four years and the senate for six years.
 - 1933: Raise in the number of constituencies to 10. Only list running in two-thirds of the constituencies were accepted and a threshold of 50,000 votes was introduced.
 - 1945: Constitutional assembly provides for a federal council (lower house) with 144 members and the Council of Nationalities representing the provinces with 175 members. In both chambers members were elected from on lists in MMCs of different sizes based on PR.
 - 1950: Federal Council elected based on plurality in SMCs.
 - 1953: Establishment of Council of Producers (214 MPs) and merging of Federal Council (282 MPs) and the Council of Nationalities (70 MPs), but they remain elected separately every four years. Parliament now comprises 566 members.
 - 1963: Establishment of five chamber parliament replacing the Council of Producers by four new chambers (the Economic Council, the Council of Education and Culture, the Council of Social Welfare, and the Organizational-Political Council). Expansion of the number of members in parliament to 670, the Council of Nationalities comprising 70 members and the other five chambers 120 members each, all elected for four years with half of the members replaced every two years. Only elections to the Federal Council were direct, the remaining councils were elected by delegates based on plurality in SMCs.
 - 1974: The Federal Assembly includes 308 indirectly elected members, thereof 220 in the Federal Council and 88 in the Council of the Republics and Provinces.
 - 1992: New state's constitution provides for a bicameral parliament consisting of the Chamber of Republics (upper house) with 20 representatives from each republic elected by the countries' republican assemblies and the Chamber of Citizens (lower house), with at least 30 directly elected representatives from each republic. Its members were elected for a four-year term based on a segmented system. 52 representatives in Serbia and six in Montenegro were elected based on plurality rule. Based on PR with closed and blocked lists 30 members were elected in Montenegro and 106 (later 108) in Serbia. Threshold of 5%. In December 1992 the segmented systems was replaced by a PR system with Serbia divided into nine constituencies with different magnitude and Montenegro into three ten-member constituencies.

- 2000: Chamber of Citizens elected by proportional representation in multi-member constituencies of different sizes; 26 constituencies in Serbia with between 3 to 10 members per district and one republic-wide constituency in Montenegro comprising 30 representatives.
- 2006: Montenegro seceded from the union of Serbia and Montenegro. PR in one nationwide constituency.

Seychelles

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1976 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Seychelles has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, consisting of 34 members. Of these 34, 25 are elected in single-member constituencies by simple majority. The remaining nine seats are nominated by the parties that secure at least 10% of the total votes. The president of Seychelles is the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1964: Two elections are held before full independence is attained in 1979.
 - 1967: All citizens over the age of 21 are allowed to vote, however, those deemed illiterate are excluded.
 - 1970: Seychelles Order establishes a Legislative Assembly with 15 directly elected members (plus three members appointed by the governor for) serving a period of four years.
 - 1970: Plurality system used in seven two-member constituencies and one single-member constituency to elect 15 members to an 18-seat Legislative Council. The Governor appointed the remaining 3 seats.
 - 1974: Parliament increased to 15 elected members and 10 appointees, five nominated by the Prime Minister and five nominated by the opposition leader.
 - 1975: London conference convenes to lay down the constitutional rules of the independence process. In addition to the elected members of the Legislative Council ten new members are appointed, five upon nomination of the Chief Minister and five upon nomination of the leader of the opposition.
 - 1976: Seychelles becomes an independent republic under a semi-presidential system. National Assembly comprised of 25 members elected through parallel (segmented) systems. Eight members were elected in single-member constituencies by first-past-the-post vote, while the remaining 17 seats were distributed using proportional representation. At independence, SDP and SPUP form a government of national unity. Newly instituted National Assembly is comprised of 25 members, which according to the agreement are to be elected through a parallel (segmented) system, including eight members determined from single-member constituencies by first-past-the-post vote, with the remaining 17 seats distributed using proportional representation.
 - 1977: Armed military coup overthrew the Mancham government, as a result of which the 1976 electoral provisions no longer applied, the Seychelles People's Progressive Front (SPPF) became the sole political party and opposition parties were outlawed.
 - 1979: Parliament, renamed the People's Assembly, included 23 members elected by simple majority vote in single-member constituencies and two persons appointed by the president to represent migrant peoples of the outer islands.
 - 1979: Seychelles People's Progressive Front (SPPF) declared the only legal party under the new constitution. The constitution also lowers voting age from 21 to 18.
 - 1991: Multi-party system legalized as a new constitution is drafted.
 - 1991: During local elections, more than 40% of the votes cast were blank ballots expressing dissatisfaction with the political status quo.
 - 1992: An Extra-ordinary Congress of the SPPF decided to for a multi-party political system and on 26 July 1992, the first multi-party elections are held.
 - 1993: Elections are held and deemed free and fair by international observers. People's Assembly renamed as the National Assembly. First-past-the-post voting in single-member constituencies used to elect 22 members. The remaining 11 seats were distributed at the national level among parties that had passed the 8% legal threshold.

- 1996: National Assembly increased to 34 members. Of these, 25 are elected using first-past-the-post voting in single-member constituencies with no more than an additional 10 distributed on the basis of proportional representation to parties surpassing the 10% legal threshold.

Sierra Leone

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1961 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Sierra Leone relies on a unicameral legislature, the Parliament, which seats 124 members. Of these 124, 112 are directly elected from single-member constituencies using first-past-the-post. The remaining 12 seats are reserved for the Paramount Chiefs from the country's 12 districts. The president of Sierra Leone is the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1951: First competitive legislative elections are held although restricted by colonial officials.
 - 1957: Second pre-independence legislative elections are held for a limited number of seats.
 - 1962: First post-independence election conducted for a 62-seat unicameral Parliament with 12 seats reserved for Paramount chiefs. After three years of rule, SLPP splits into two factions. The other new party, All-People's Congress (APC) forms the official opposition in the first-post independence elections.
 - 1965: An attempt by SLPP to make the country a one-party state is defeated by negative public reaction.
 - 1967: Democratic hand-over to the opposition—ACP.
 - 1971: Republic is proclaimed by Prime Minister Stevens.
 - 1973: Stevens dissolves the Parliament after declaring a state of emergency ahead of the upcoming elections, which are eventually held for a 97-member Parliament, including 12 paramount chiefs.
 - 1973: The All People's Congress (APC) maintains a de facto single-party state
 - 1977: Elections are held for a 100-member Parliament, including the 12 paramount chiefs. Faced with a reduced majority, the APC adopts a constitutional amendment to establish a single-party state the following year.
 - 1977: Single-party state remains under APC control, with pro forma elections in 1982 and 1986 for 104 and 127 seats, respectively (each including the 12 paramount chiefs).
 - 1978: A referendum in favor of a one-party state is approved. Non-APC MPs are forced to resign or join the ruling party.
 - 1991: New multiparty constitution is approved and elections are scheduled for 1992. Before elections could occur, a military coup replaces the legislature with a 22-member National Provisional Ruling Council.
 - 1992: Military coups and civil wars
 - 1996: First multiparty elections are held for an 80-member Parliament (including the 12 paramount chiefs), despite another military coup early in the year. 15 political parties led by 15 presidential candidates contest.
 - 1997: Military coup ousts the government, but regional forces removed the ruling military council early the next year, reinstalling the previous government.
 - 1998: Civil war rages despite peace accords and UN peacekeepers, thus preventing most organized political activity until elections are called following a 2001 cease-fire.
 - 2002: As per the Electoral Laws Act of 2002, Parliament contains 124 members, of which 112 are directly elected using party-list proportional representation in 14 multi-seat constituencies due to war displacements. Another 12 members are paramount chiefs elected to represent provincial districts.
 - 2007: Elections are held for the 112 directly elected members of the Parliament using the constitutionally mandated single-member constituency system.

Singapore

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1965 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Singapore relies on a unicameral legislature, the Parliament, which currently seats 92 members. Of these 92, 89 members are directly elected, either from 13 single-member constituencies or 16 multi-member constituencies. As many as nine members – called “non-constituency members of parliament” – may be appointed by opposition parties; the current Parliament has three. The constitution also allows the appointment of nine additional members – called “nominated members of parliament” – who are appointed by the president of Singapore. These members serve a term of two and a half years. Regarding the executive branch, the president is the head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1963: Single seat districts with the plurality rule. Singapore ceased being a British colony and became part of Malaysia. An election was held to seat a Legislative Assembly of Singapore, which became the Parliament of Singapore when Singapore became an independent state in 1965.
 - 1988: A mix of single seat districts and Group Representative Constituencies (GRCs). GRCs contain three to six seats and can only be contested by teams of candidates from the same party (or allied independents). At least one member of each team must be from the Malay, Indian or another minority community. Voters cast a single vote for a team and the team with a plurality of the votes wins all the seats in that GRC.
 - 1990: A constitutional provision is introduced that allows the president of Singapore to appoint up to 9 “nominated members of parliament.”

Slovakia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1993 following the dissolution of Czechoslovakia
2. Political Institutions: Slovakia has a unicameral National Council (Národná rada) with 150 seats. The President is elected by absolute majority for a five year term. The Prime Minister is appointed by the president and approved by the National Council.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1990: Four multi-member constituencies using list-based proportional representation. Parties needed 5% of national vote, alliances of two or three parties needed 7% of national vote, and alliances of four or more parties needed 10% of national vote to receive parliamentary representation.
 - 1998: Single nationwide constituency and Droop quota introduced. Voters may select up to four preferential votes for candidates in a party list. For preferential votes to count, candidates need at least 3% of national vote for their party. Seats are first allocated based on preferential votes followed by party list order.

Slovenia

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1991

2. Political Institutions: Slovenia relies on a parliamentary representative democracy with the prime minister as the head of state. The president is elected by popular vote for a five-year term and the majority party leader is nominated for the position of prime minister. The National Assembly (Državni zbor Republike Slovenije) is the Slovenian legislative branch and consists of 90 members who serve a four-year term..

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1990: First free multi-party elections for the Sociopolitical Chamber of Parliament.
- 1991: New constitution introduces a bicameral parliament, of which only the National Assembly is elected directly. Eighty-eight members are elected by proportional representation from eight eleven-member constituencies. The Italian and Hungarian ethnic minorities are represented with one member each.
- 1998: Proportional representation threshold increased from 2.5% to 4%.

Solomon Islands

1. Year Achieved Independence: July 7, 1978 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: The Solomon Islands has a unicameral legislature, the National Parliament, which seats 50 members who are directly elected from single-member constituencies that use first-past-the-post. The prime minister is the country's head of government, and the Queen of England is the head of state. Party affiliations tend to be weak. As a result, elections feature many independent candidates and party affiliations remain extremely fluid during and after campaigns.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1978: Post-independence constitution establishes the unicameral National Parliament of Solomon Islands, to be composed of one seat from each legislative constituency, elected by simple plurality vote. Number of constituencies is to be set by law, numbering no less than thirty and no more than fifty.
 - 1980: Electoral law sets the number of constituencies at 38.
 - 1994: Number of National Parliament constituencies increased from 38 to 47.
 - 1997: Number of National Parliament constituencies increased from 47 to 50.

Somaliland

1. Year Achieved Independence: Originally gained independence on June 26, 1960, then merged with Italian Somaliland on July 1, 1960 to form the Somali Republic. Declared independence and seceded on May 18, 1991, but has failed to receive formal recognition from the international community.
2. Political Institutions: Somaliland has a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, seats 82 members who are directly elected. The upper chamber, the Guurti, consists of 82 seats who are indirectly elected. The president of Somaliland is the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1991: Somali National Movement (SNM) Central Committee acts as the interim legislative and electoral body while a constitution is drafted.
 - 1993: The SNM establishes a bicameral legislature, which includes the House of Representatives.
 - 2001: The constitution is approved by national referendum. According to the constitution, the House of Representatives is to hold 82 members directly elected for five-year terms using party-list proportional representation in the territory's six regions.

South Africa

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1934 from the United Kingdom. Became a republic on May 31, 1961.

2. Political Institutions: South Africa relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, the National Assembly, consists of 400 members who are directly elected from nine multi-member constituencies. Seats are allocated using closed party-list, proportional representation. Of the 400 members, 200 come from regional party lists, and the other 200 members are elected from national party lists. The upper Chamber, the National Council of Provinces, seats 90 members who are indirectly elected. The parties that govern in each of the nine provincial assemblies select 10 Senators. The president of South Africa is the country's head of state and head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1899: The Anglo-Boer war. In 1910, the republics of Transvaal and Orange Free State merge to form the Union of South Africa.
 - 1930: The Women's Enfranchisement Act gives women of European origin the right to vote.
 - 1936: The African Cape population is placed on a separate roll. The Indian population in Natal and Transvaal are allowed a limited parliamentary representation which is boycotted and repealed in 1948.
 - 1959: African representation by Europeans is abolished through the promotion of Bantu Self-Government.
 - 1961: A referendum is passed changing South Africa into a republic. Membership to the Commonwealth is terminated.
 - 1964: A representative body for Indians is formed although all its officials are directly nominated.
 - 1968: Representation of the Colored persons is abolished. They are instead given the Colored Persons Representative Council.
 - 1978: A de facto parallel government is installed through management committees which are controlled by the state security council and the military.
 - 1983: The Westminster-type model is replaced by an executive presidential system. Two chambers: the House of Delegates and the House of Representative for Non-Europeans are created in addition to the House of Assembly for Europeans. This makes South Africa a tricameral system.
 - 1994: Universal suffrage is allowed for the first time. The 1983 tricameral system which separated parliamentary representation for Europeans, Coloureds and Indians is replaced. There are 90 seats in legislature chosen from 9 multi-member constituencies.

Spain

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1492

2. Political Institutions: Spain relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower house, the Congress of Deputies, consists of 350 members. All but two members are elected from 50 multi-member constituencies; here, seats are determined according to the d'Hondt method for proportional representation. The two remaining members are each elected from a single-member constituency that uses a simple majority. The upper house, the Senate, seats 266 members. Of these 266, 208 members are directly elected, and 58 are indirectly elected by the parliaments of Spain's autonomous communities. The king of Spain is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1810-1812: Indirect elections in four steps.
 - 1834: Indirect elections in two steps: 1000 great electors for 190 representatives to the Cortes.
 - 1836: (May) Direct elections in multi-member constituencies (provinces) with a two-ballot majority system. Absolute majority required at the first ballot and plurality at the second. Access to the second ballot limited to three times the number of seats to be allocated. Multiple voting (August) Indirect elections in four steps.
 - 1837: Direct elections
 - 1845-1856: Direct elections with two ballots
 - 1865-1888: Single-ballot plurality elections (Single-transferable vote, i.e., STV). Each voter has the right to cast one vote also in multi-member constituencies and since 1871 in most single-member constituencies.
 - 1890: Limited vote system in multi-member constituencies. One, two, or three votes less than the number of seats to be allocated. No limited vote in two-member constituencies.
 - 1907: Compulsory voting introduced.
 - 1920: Mixed-member system. Plurality in 311 single-member constituencies and 28 multi-member constituencies.
 - 1931: In 63 multi-member constituencies elections by plurality with limited voting. To be elected a list had to receive at least 20 percent of the votes.
 - 1933-1936: The legal threshold was increased to 40 percent. If no candidate received 40 percent of the votes a second ballot was held.
 - 1977: 350 seats are elected in 50 multi-member constituencies and two single-member constituencies by D'Hondt. The legal threshold for representation is 3% of valid votes within each constituency.

St. Vincent and the Grenadines

1. Year Achieved Independence: October 27, 1979 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: St. Vincent and the Grenadines relies on a unicameral legislature called the House of Assembly, which seats 23 members. Of the 23, 15 members are directly elected in single-member constituencies using first-past-the-post. Six of the members are appointed by the governor general, and the remaining two are reserved for the Assembly's speaker and the attorney general. The Queen of England is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1979: First independent Vincentian constitution establishes the unicameral House of Assembly, to be made up of six senators – four appointed by the Governor General on advice of the Prime Minister, and two on advice of the Leader of the Opposition – and a number, to be set by law, of representatives elected from single-member plurality districts. In the event that the Speaker of the House and Attorney-General are not representatives or senators, they are also constitutionally considered ex-officio members of the House of Assembly. The pre-independence colonial constituencies were preserved, establishing 13 elected seats.
 - 1989: Number of single-member plurality constituencies increased to 15.

Suriname

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1975 from the Netherlands

2. Political Institutions: Suriname relies on a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which seats 51 members who directly elected from 10 multi-member constituencies. Candidates are elected through a preferential party-list system in which the first seat is given to the party receiving the most votes. Additional seats are awarded to the party with the highest average number of votes. Seats go to the candidates with the highest number of preferential votes. Candidates must be affiliated with a political party. The president of Suriname is the country's head of state and head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1866: The Colonial States established as a parliament. The first session was officially opened on May 8, 1866. Colonial States consisted of 13 members of which 9 were chosen by the voters, and four appointed by the Governor.
 - 1936: New constitution renames Colonial States to the "States of Suriname." The number of members was increased to 15, of which 10 were chosen by voting citizens, while five were appointed by the Governor.
 - 1948: Universal suffrage introduced, legislature increased to 21 seats.
 - 1963: Number of seats increased to 36; 24 people chosen according to the majority system and 12 selected according to the system of proportional representation nationwide.
 - 1966: The Land Ordinance of 28 December 1966 increases the number of seats to 39.
 - 1975: Post-independence constitution converts States of Suriname into 39-member Parliament of the Republic of Suriname. 27 members were elected by plurality in single-member districts, with the remaining 12 being elected through a nationwide proportional constituency.
 - 1985: Parliament abolished following 1980 coup, replaced by unelected legislative assembly.
 - 1987: New constitution establishes 51-member National Assembly, to be elected based on proportional representation voting from 10 multi-member electoral districts on a largest average formula basis with preferential votes. In each constituency, the first seat is awarded to the political party having obtained the highest number of votes. The remaining seats are awarded to the party with the highest average number of votes. In each party list, the candidate(s) having obtained the most preferential votes are declared elected. Vacancies arising between general elections are filled by substitutes, according to the order of names on each party list.

Sweden

1. Year Achieved Independence: The beginning of modern Sweden can be traced back to the Vasa era (1521-1611). The Swedish Empire was established in 1648.
2. Political Institutions: Sweden has a unicameral legislature, the Riksdag, which seats 349 members. Of the 349, 310 members are elected in one of 29 multi-member constituencies using closed party-list, proportional representation. In these multi-member constituencies, seats are allocated according to the modified Sainte-Laguë method. The remaining 39 members compete in one nationwide constituency using proportional representation where parties must receive at least 4% of the vote in order to be seated. The king is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1866: Plurality elections in either single- or multi-member constituencies and either direct or indirect. Secret ballot. Multiple voting.
 - 1909: Multi-member system. Seats allocated with D'Hondt formula.
 - 1948: 230 seats are elected
 - 1952: D'Hondt formula replaced by modified Sainte-Laguë.
 - 1956: 231 seats are elected.
 - 1960: 232 seats are elected.
 - 1964: 233 seats are elected.
 - 1970: 350 seats are elected. 310 are allocated in multi-member constituencies and 40 are redistributed to parties whose share of seats is less than the share of votes. National barrier clause introduced (four per cent) for allocation in constituencies.
 - 1974: Number of representatives reduced to 349. Number of redistributed seats reduced to 39.

Switzerland

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1291 Confederation of three Cantons. Guarantee of Swiss neutrality at the Vienna Congress in 1815. Adoption of the Swiss Federal Constitution in 1848.
2. Political Institutions: Switzerland relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower chamber, the National Council, consists of 200 members who are directly elected from 21 multi-member constituencies and five single-member constituencies. In the multi-member constituencies, seats are allocated using the Hagenbach-Bischoff method. The upper chamber, the Council of States, seats 46 members who are directly elected. Regarding the executive branch, the Swiss Federal Council serves as the country's head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1848: 111 seats by different cantonal electoral laws
 - 1850: Mixed-member constituencies. Seats (1872-1878: 135, 1881-1887: 145, 1890-1899: 147, 1902-1908: 167, 1911-1917: 189) allocated by direct elections in both single- and multi-member constituencies. Multiple vote. Three-ballot system: 1) absolute majority required at first two ballots (majority of the voters); 2) plurality sufficient at third ballot.
 - 1872: The majority at the first two ballots is changed into a majority of the valid votes.
 - 1900: Two-ballot system: 1) absolute majority required at first ballot; 2) plurality at second ballot.
 - 1919: Mixed-member system. Seats (1919: 189, 1922-1928: 198, 1931-1939: 187, 1943-1947: 194, 1955: 196 elected by proportional representation (Hagenbach-Bischoff) in multi-member constituencies. Plurality elections in those cantons in which there is only one seat to be returned. Constituencies are the cantons and the half-cantons. Multiple voting, cumulative voting up to two votes for one candidate, panachage and apparentement allowed. Voters allowed to add or erase names from list or to compose lists without party specification. Each canton has at least one representative.
 - 1963: The National Council increases from 196 to 200 seats.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Council were held on the following dates.

Taiwan

1. Year Achieved Independence: Founded in 1949 after the Chinese Civil War
2. Political Institutions: Taiwan has a unicameral legislature, the Legislative Yuan, which consists of 113 members. Of these 113, 73 members hail from single-member constituencies, 34 are elected in a nationwide constituency, and six seats are reserved for indigenous people. The president is the country's head of state, and the premiere heads the country's executive branch.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1948: Single non-transferable vote with varying district magnitude. Ongoing civil war prevented voting in many constituencies and many seats went unfilled.
 - 1991: Mixed-member system with 125-176 seats elected using SNTV from districts ranging in magnitude from 1 to 27, 36-41 at-large seats elected from a single national district via PR, and eight seats representing indigenous people elected using the single non-transferable vote.
 - 2005: Mixed-member system with 73 single-seat districts, 34 at-large seats elected from a single national district via PR, and six seats representing indigenous people elected using the single non-transferable vote.

Tanzania

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1961 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Tanzania has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which currently seats 369 members. Of these 369, 257 members hail from single-member constituencies that use first-past-the-post, and 110 members are women who are elected by parties seated in the National Assembly. The president may appoint no more than 10 members, although the 2015 National Assembly seats only one presidential appointment. Finally, the attorney general holds one seat. The president of Tanzania is both head of state and head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1964: First-past-the-post system established in 239 single-member constituencies.
 - 1992: Constitution allows for multiple political parties to compete in elections.

4. Electoral History: Elections to the National Assembly were held on the following dates.

Thailand

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1238

- 2. Political Institutions: Since the 2014 coup d'état, Thailand has a unicameral legislature, the National Assembly, which consists of 200 members who are appointed by the National Council for Peace and Order. Prior to the 2014 coup, Thailand relied on a bicameral legislature, with a lower chamber seating 500 members where directly elected in a mixed-member system. The king is the country's head of state, and the prime minister serves as head of government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1946: Plurality rule in single-seat constituencies.
- 1947: Block vote (or Multiple Non-Transferable Vote MNTV) system with district magnitude from 1 to 15. See next entry for more details.
- 1974: Block vote (or Multiple Non-Transferable Vote, MNTV) system. Most electoral constituencies had two or three seats (alongside a handful of single-seat districts). Parties were required to run a full slate of candidates in any district they wished to contest. Voters were allowed to cast as many votes as there were seats in the constituency, but were not allowed to cast multiple votes for the same candidate. Voters were allowed to partially abstain (i.e. not cast all of their votes) and were allowed to split their votes among candidates from different parties.
- 1997: Mixed-member system. 400 seats were elected from single-seat constituencies. 100 seats were elected from nation-wide party lists using proportional representation. There was a 5% threshold for the party list tier.
- 2007: Mixed-member system. 400 seats elected using a block vote system (as used between 1974 and 1997) with district magnitude of 1 to 3 seats. 80 seats were elected on a proportional basis from 8 regional party lists, 10 seats assigned to each region.
- 2011: 375 single-member constituencies are elected by first-past-the-post. The remaining 125 seats are chosen using closed party-list, proportional representation from one nationwide constituency.
- 2014: Coup d'état dissolves the House of Representatives and the Senate, supplanting them with a unicameral National Assembly of Thailand.

Trinidad and Tobago

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1962 from the United Kingdom.
2. Political Institutions: Trinidad and Tobago relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, seats 41 members who are directly elected from single-member constituencies using first-past-the-post. The upper chamber, the Senate, consists of 31 members who are appointed by the president.. The president is the head of state and the prime minister serves as head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1961: Independence talks yield plans for Trinidad and Tobago to gain independence from the UK the following year. Bicameral legislature replaces unicameral colonial legislative council. The lower house is made up of seats elected by plurality from single-member districts, with the initial number of constituencies being established at 30. Constitutional provisions for legislative vacancies during the four years following independence arrange for by-elections to be held within 90 days of a vacancy.
 - 1965: Number of lower-house seats increased from 30 to 36.
 - 2005: Number of lower-house seats increased from 36 to 41.

Ukraine

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1917-1921 from the Russian Empire, 1991 from the Soviet Union.
2. Political Institutions: Ukraine has a unicameral legislature, the Verkhovna Rada, which seats 450 members who are directly elected. Of the 450 members, 225 hail from single-member constituencies using first-past-the-post, and 225 members compete in a nationwide constituency where seats are allocated by closed party-list, proportional representation. The president is the country's head of state, and the prime minister is the country's head of government.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1990: Establishment of unicameral parliament, Verkhovna Rada, comprising 450 members elected based on absolute majority and possibility of negative voting, i.e. to cross off the name of the candidate. Introduction of a semi-presidential system.
 - 1994: Introduction of absolute majority in the run-offs and reduction of the legislature from five to four years.
 - 1997: Change to a segmented electoral system with half of the 450-seat parliament elected in single-member constituencies (SMCs) by simple majority and the other half of the deputies elected in a nationwide constituency based on PR with a 4% electoral threshold
 - 2006: Introduction of pure proportional representation system in a nation-wide constituency and extension of legislature term to five years. Legal electoral threshold of 3%.
 - 2011: Re-introduction of mixed segmented system established in 1997.

United Kingdom

1. Year Achieved Independence: The Kingdom of Great Britain was created in 1707 by the political union of the Kingdom of England and the Kingdom of Scotland.
2. Political Institutions: The United Kingdom relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower chamber, the House of Commons, consists of 650 members who are directly elected from single-member constituencies. Seats are secured using first-past-the-post. The upper chamber, the House of Lords, seats 782 unelected members. The prime minister serves as the head of government, and the Queen is the head of state.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1832: Redistribution of seats across counties and boroughs in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland. Direct plurality elections in mainly two-member constituencies of unequal size in terms of geographical area and density of population. Multiple voting (as many votes as seats to be returned in each constituency).
 - 1867: Redistribution of seats across boroughs and counties in England, Wales, and Scotland. Limited vote in three- and four-member constituencies (two and three votes respectively).
 - 1884: Redistribution of seats. Mostly single-member constituencies with two-member constituencies for university seats and 24 boroughs.
 - 1948: University seats and plural voting abolished. Two-member constituencies abolished.

United States of America

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1776 from the United Kingdom

2. Political Institutions: Since ratification of its Constitution in 1789, the United States has been a federal republic with a bicameral parliament. The president has been and remains indirectly elected by the Electoral College, whose members since the 1830s have been directly elected by voters in the states. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, has been directly elected since the founding of the republic, while the members of the upper chamber, the Senate, were at first appointed by state governments and then beginning in the Progressive Era (1900-1920) were directly elected in all the states (This was mandated by the 17th Constitutional Amendment in 1913, though many states had already begun the practice of direct election). By tradition, and then later by statute, national elections have been conducted using the principle of single member constituencies and plurality rule. This includes the House of Representatives. While nearly all states have used SMCs and plurality rule throughout their histories, there have been exceptions. A few states in some eras, for example, held at-large elections for multiple House seats. In 1967, the national Congress mandated that all states have as many congressional districts as they had seats in the House.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1789: Use of single member constituencies with plurality rule has been the general method for House of Representatives elections in the United States. There were a few exceptions in some states in some eras prior to 1967. Quite a few states, mostly in the South, use a majority run-off system at the party primary.

Uruguay

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1828 from the Empire of Brazil.
2. Political Institutions: Uruguay relies on a bicameral parliament. The lower chamber, the House of Representatives, seats 99 members who are directly elected from 19 multi-member constituencies. Seats are allocated using closed party-list, proportional representation. The upper chamber, the Senate, consists of 31 members. Of these 31, 30 are directly elected in one nationwide constituency, and the remaining seat is reserved for the vice-president. Uruguay is a presidential system. The president is the head of the state and is elected based on absolute majority for a five-year term. If none of the candidates achieves a majority, a run-off is held between the two best-placed candidates.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1830: The constitution establishes a bicameral parliament with a president, elected indirectly by both parliamentary chambers. In contrast to the senate, only the chamber of representatives is directly and publicly elected.
 - 1893: Introduction of ballot paper, but because the voters have to sign the ballot paper the elections remain publicly.
 - 1910: Uruguayan electoral system relies on double simultaneous vote for the election of all representative organs (president, chamber of deputies, senate) based on single ballot and a single vote. The chamber of representatives consists of 123 directly elected members.
 - 1918: Constitution introduces direct, secret, and universal male suffrage.
 - 1924: Voters have to enrol in the National Electoral Register.
 - 1932: Direct election of the senate consisting of 30 members. Reduction of the number of members of the chamber of representatives to 99.
 - 1997: Constitutional reform abolishes the double simultaneous vote and thus separates the presidential and parliamentary elections.
4. Electoral History: Elections to the House of Representatives were held on the following years.

Venezuela

1. Year Achieved Independence: 1811 from Spain.

2. Political Institutions: Venezuela has a unicameral National Assembly (Asamblea Nacional) with 167 seats. The National Assembly has a mixed system. 113 seats are elected by majority vote, 51 seats are elected by proportional representation, and 3 seats are reserved for indigenous communities. Representatives serve 5-year terms. The President is the Chief of State and Head of Government.

3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:

- 1946: Proportional representation in multi-member constituencies with closed and blocked lists.
- 1993: Personalized proportional representation, with half of the seats elected through plurality.
- 1997: Electoral quota for female candidates, where one third of list candidates for each party had to be women.
- 1999: Supreme Tribunal of Justice declares electoral quote for women unconstitutional.

Zimbabwe

1. Year Achieved Independence: November 11, 1965 from the United Kingdom
2. Political Institutions: Zimbabwe relies on a bicameral legislature. The lower house, the National Assembly, consists of 270 seats. Of these 270, 210 members are directly elected from single-member constituencies. The remaining 60 seats are reserved for six women in each of the 10 administrative provinces; these women are elected based on the number of votes cast for political parties. The upper house, the Senate, seats 80 members. Of these 80, 60 hail from the 10 administrative districts (6 members from each), 16 are chiefs, and two are reserved for persons with disabilities. The remaining two seats are for the President and the Deputy President of the National Council of Chiefs.
3. Lower Chamber Electoral System:
 - 1980: New constitution establishes political infrastructure of Zimbabwe in place of previous Rhodesian government. Bicameral Parliament instituted, with lower house made up of 100 seats, 20 of which were reserved for white Zimbabweans.
 - 1987: Constitutional amendment abolishes White-reserved seats along with the Senate, House of Assembly seats set to 120 members elected from single-member plurality districts, 10 provincial governors, eight elected Chiefs from the non-metropolitan provinces, and 12 appointed by the President.
 - 2005: Senate re-established.
 - 2008: Elected House of Assembly seats increased to 210, with appointed and ex officio seats removed and reallocated to the Senate.
